Parking Problem Under Discussion At Public Meeting

"Front Porch Parking" of Local Cars Causes Congested Traffic Conditions on Wall Street—Traffic Situation Discussed at Meeting Thursday Night.

Half hour parkng on Wall street, Main street, North Front street, Clinton avenue to Main street, and on Fair street would solve somewhat the traffic problem in the uptown business section of the city on Saturday afternoons and evenings, according to M. H. Herzog of Wall street, who introduced a resolution that the board of public works adopt an ordinance to that effect at a meeting of the board and uptown business men and others interested held at the city hall Thursday evening. Another resolution that the entire matter of parking of cars in the city be left to a committee of citizens to study the situation and recommend some plan which was suggested by President Charles A. Lasher of the Chamber of Commerce was also adopted, as well as a resolution by Joseph A. Sheppard, manager of O'Reilly's John street store, that such committee be appointed by Mayor Block.

The Rev. Robert A. Greenwell, member of the board of public works, presided at the request of Mayor Block, and explained that the meeting had been called to discuss the problem of handling traffic congestion in the uptown business section. He called attention to the new parking grounds that had been opened in the rear of the R-G-R store and said the board of public works was willing and anxious to hear expressions of opinion from the business men as to what should be done to solve the traffic problem in the congested district uptown.

Mayor Block Suggests 15 Minutes.

Mayor Block said that to start the discussion it had been suggested to him that a time limit of 15 minutes for parking uptown be adopted. If that was satisfactory to the merchants the board could draft an ordinance to that effect.

"Front Porch Parking."

Chris Longyear of the L. S. Winne Company was the first of the large delegation present to speak. He said the main difficulty was caused by the city's own residents who park their cars in the uptown district and leave them there for hours at a time. He said it was necessary for the Wall street merchants to use Fair street for loading and unloading the big trucks, and that street was used mostly for heavy truck traffic.

What Fire Department Wanted.

Commissioner William S. Eltinge of the board of fire commissioners said that in the absence of the president of that board he would appear for the fire department and state the three things the fire department would like to have done.

1—That the east side of Fair street remain as it is.

2—That the block between Fair and Wall street on North Front street remain unchanged.

3—That the corner of Clinton avenue and North Front street be absolutely restricted to parking of cars 50 feet from each corner. It was almost impossible to make the turn there with the fire apparatus and the parking of cars there made it yet more dangerous.

As a private citizen, said Mr. Eltinge, he found many of the uptown business men with whom he has talked are willing to allow restricted parking and would like to see it given a tryout on two blocks on Wall street.

John Street Blocked.

Thomas J. Comerford of The Leader called attention to John street and said it was so blocked with cars it was difficult to get through. Most of the trouble on John street, Wall street and Fair street was due to the parking of cars by city residents who left them there for hours. He favored a 15 minute parking limit.

Parking on Fair Street.

Benjamin J. Winne of the L. S. Winne Company suggested that parking be allowed on the Stuyvesant Hotel side of Fair street. He called attention to the fact that many large trucks used that street to unload and load goods at the Wall street stores.

Good For Saturdays.

C. E. Wonderly of the Wonderly Company said the suggestion of having a time-limit of 15 minutes on Wall street would work well on Saturday afternoons and evenings but he did not approve of it on the other days of the week for there was not the congestion of traffic then.

Can't Eat in 15 Minutes.

Manager C. W. Winne of the Stuyvesant Hotel said that if the hotel was limited to 15 minutes parking it would work a hardship as a guest could not eat his or her dinner in fifteen minutes.

John Street Satisfactory.

Joseph A. Sheppard, manager of the O'Reilly John street store, said that conditions on John street were satisfactory and that a 15 minute limit would be out of the question. A truck could not load or unload in that time and he for one could not always wait on a customer in fifteen minutes.

Sheppard's Suggestion.

Mr. Sheppard suggested that the uptown merchants get together and devise some plan and then come be-

Joseph Drake Dies At City Hospital

Well Known Printer, Publisher and Secretary of The Ulster County Society Succumbs After Three Weeks' Illness—Spent Life Helping Other People.

Joseph Drake, editor and publisher of The Home County Magazine, and secretary of The Ulster County Society in the city of New York, died at 9 o'clock Thursday night at the Kingston City Hospital, where he had been a patient since May 28. Death was due to cancer of the stomach. He came to Kingston several days before his admission to the hospital, hoping to recuperate from a malady whose nature he did not know but which in the previous three months had caused him to lose thirty pounds in weight. He at first attributed his ill health to worriment following a fire last February in the apartment house on West Fifty-seventh street, New York city, which had practically destroyed every apartment in the building, including his own.

Joseph Drake was in his 52nd year. He was born in Kingston, the son of the late Abram T. Drake and Sarah A. Davis, his wife, the former having been a native of Port Jervis and the latter having been born near Binghamton, N. Y. They resided in Kingston for many years, and Chaplain Drake, as he was familiarly known, was undoubtedly one of the best known men in Ulster county, having served for thirty-seven years as chaplain of Pratt Post, G. A. R., and during most of that time as a lay preacher of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

After receiving his early education at School No 8, Mr. Drake entered the employ of the Kingston Leader, where he learned the printing business, afterwards becoming one of the most proficient linotype operators in the state and later joining the reportorial staff. In 1911, he went to New York city, where for a time he was a linotype operator for the New York World, and subsequently had charge of the printing for Columbia University. Shortly afterward he embarked in the printing and engraving business with offices at No. 116 Nassau street, and continued in that business until his death.

His companionable disposition brought him in contact with many other men of Ulster county who were engaged in business in New York, and it was principally through his efforts that The Ulster County Society was organized in 1915 and continued to grow to its present membership of nearly 500. He became secretary of the society and was unanimously re-elected each succeeding year. At the annual banquet in 1924 he was presented by the society with a gold watch as a small testimonial of the esteem in which every member held him.

Mr. Drake's close association with The Ulster County Society members led him three years ago to establish The Home County Magazine which will complete its third year with the forthcoming June number, whose issuance, undertaken by friends, has been delayed by his illness. The Home County Magazine filled a long-felt want and became self-sustaining the first year. Published monthly, it has been devoted to the interests and became the official organ of the County Societies of Albany, Dutchess, Greene, Ulster, Orange, Columbia, Rensselaer, and the Daughters of Columbia County Historical Society, Inc., in New York city.

From month to month Mr. Drake's magazine published interesting reminiscences contributed by men from the home counties who had become distinguished in their various lines of activity in New York and by those who had remained in the old home counties. Few magazines can show a more uniformly eminent list of contributors, who displayed the same pride in furnishing material that Mr. Darke took in publishing it.

It was in a more personal sense, however, that Mr. Drake was known to innumerable friends, to all of whom he was affectionately known as "Joe." He was ever ready to do a service for anyone who asked it. His apartment in New York for many years was the home of Ulster county men who were engaged in business in New York—some temporarily, some permanently. Ulster county men called suddenly to New York on business and unable to secure hotel accommodations were immediately taken by Mr. Drake to his apartment as soon as he was aware of their dilemma. Innumerable matters of personal business were entrusted to his care by busy Ulster county men who were unable to go to New York, and all such tasks were performed by him willingly and without the slightest idea of recompense. His extensive acquaintance among men of large business interests enabled him to secure positions for many a man, boy and girl from Ulster county, for all of which he exacted only a promise that they would do their best and be an honor to themselves, their families, their friends and to Ulster county. His consuming ambition, which he achieved as few men do, was to "Help somebody."

Politically, Mr. Drake was a Democrat. In 1904 he was a candidate for Assemblyman in the First District of Ulster county and again in 1905. Several years later he was largely instrumental in organizing the younger Democrats of Kingston city into an organization which was called the "Young Turks," because of the prevailing popularity and name of the young revolutionary party in Turkey, and that organization was successful in changing the political aspect of the Democratic organization within the county and transferring control of the city administration to the Democratic party.

Fraternally, he was a member of Kingston Lodge, No. 10, Free and Accepted Masons, which he joined in 1897. He was Master of the lodge in 1902 and subsequently for two terms was district deputy grand master of the Ulster-Greene district. Each year since he was Master he has attended the annual meeting of the lodge and assisted in installing the new officers.

Mr. Drake is survived by one brother, Murray C. Drake of Binghamton, and one sister, Mrs. Anna Drake Ripley of Old Forge, N. Y.

To a degree which few people realize, Mr. Drake exemplified the principle of service to his fellows. To be of practical help and benefit and to furnish pleasure to someone was his constant ideal. He was proud of Kingston and Ulster county and extremely sensitive of their honor. Largely through his efforts the present memorial tablet in front of the city hall, designed by James E. Kelly, the celebrated sculptor, and containing the names of Kingston's sons and daughters in the World War, was placed in position, and he represented Mr. Kelly at its dedication. One typical instance of his efforts to "make somebody happy" is little known. At the close of the World War Kingston was preparing for a monster "Welcome Home" demonstration for its returning sons and daughters who had been in service. By accident Mr. Drake learned that some of the soldiers were still in camps in New Jersey and on Long Island and would not receive their discharge in time to return home for the welcome. Telephone messages were not accomplishing desired results, so dropping all personal business, Mr. Drake visited the two camps, obtained access to all the necessary military authorities, secured the discharge of the men, and at the end of more than forty-eight hours' continuous work started for Kingston with the Kingston soldiers from both camps, arriving in time to take part in the demonstration. "It will only happen once in their lifetime and it will make somebody happier," was his explanation and thanks to the officials who made it possible for him to bring the boys back for the "Welcome Home."

The funeral will take place from the St. James M. E. Church, with which his father for so many years was closely identified, on Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, with interment in Wiltwyck Cemetery. There will be Masonic services at the grave.

McKay Again Quits Police Work

Former Kingstonian, Who Was Popular Head of Aqueduct Police, Acted as Secretary of Recent International Police Conference.

Col. Douglas I. McKay, who was chief of the New York city board of water supply police force during the construction of the Ashokan reservoir and Catskill aqueduct, during which time he lived in Kingston, has resigned from the staff of special deputy police commissioners of New York after having just completed his duties as secretary of the recent International Police Conference. This is the second time that Colonel McKay has severed his connection with the police department since Commissioner Enright has been in command.

Colonel McKay resigned about a year nd a half ago but was reappointed on February 18 of this year and specially detailed to the police conference.

Notice of Colonel McKay's resignation and its acceptance by Commissioner Enright was carried in Police Department General Order 26, issued Thursday. The same order carried the notification of the appointment of William H. (Big Bill) Edwards as a special deputy police commissioner.

Colonel McKay was warmly commended by the visiting chiefs of police for the capable manner in which he handled the arrangements at the conference. He had also served at previous conferences, and when the International Police Bureau was formed in 1921 Colonel McKay was chosen as its head.

The resignation became effective a week ago.

Colonel McKay served as police commissioner during the end of the Kline administration and the beginning of the Mitchell administration, and was a special deputy commissioner under Commissioner Enright for two and a half years. He is an engineer by profession.

Graduated from City College of New York and West Point, he was commissioned in the Coast Artillery. He resigned his commission in 1908 to accept the position of deputy chief of the Aqueduct Police Force under the board of water supply. Eight months later he was made chief and held that post until June, 1911, when he was made first deputy commissioner of the New York city police force. He served in the Ordnance Corps during the war and was chief assistant to the director of purchases.

Colonel McKay has always been a stanch defender of Commissioner Enright's administration of the force.

Norway Acclaims Amundsen Hero For Polar Flight

Expedition Got Within 150 Miles of North Pole and No Land Was Sighted—Will Again Try to Fly to Pole—Obtained Useful Data.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Oslo, Norway, June 19.—Captain Roald Amundsen was the national here of Norway today.

An official message of congratulations was forwarded by the Norwegian government to the explorer, who with his party has returned safely to King's Bay, Spitzbergen, after being missing 28 days in the regions of the North Pole.

"The Norewgian government," the message said, "send you and your brave companions hearty greetings and congratulations on your wonderful journey. Welcome home."

Members of the Intstoorthing, the Norwegian parliament, stood while the president opened the chamber session with congratulations for Captain Amundsen. Dr. Skattum told the chamber the soundings made by Amundsen within 160 miles of the Pole were significant and valuable. M. Salvesen, president of the Baltic White Sea Conference, proposed three cheers for Amundsen, which were enthusiastically given.

"He belongs not to Norway, but to the world," Salveson said.

Amundsen, Lieutenant Lincoln Ellsworth and the expedition crew of four men returned yesterday to King's Bay aboard a Danish sailing steamer.

The expedition got to within 150 miles of the North Pole, according to advices today. No land was sighted.

Amundsen plans, it was said, again to try to fly to the Pole.

Details of Amundsen's daring trip was eagerly awaited by all Norway today. The news of his safety was received with rejoicing. National anthems were played in public places and crowds stood in the streets, cheering.

There was much conjecture here today what Amundsen's conclusions will be as a result of his flight. He said he was not able to see many miles beyond the point where one of his airplanes was frozen in an ice lane. When he started on the return journey in the second plane he said his "observation" indicated there was no land in the vicinity of the North Pole.

It is believed from preliminary reports which have come from him at King's Bay that he is convinced that on the Norwegian side of the polar regions there is nothing but ice and open water.

Explorers and scientists here were discussing the probable effect of Amundsen's experience on other exploration parties, and specifically whether it would deter the Donald B. Mac Millan expedition, which had been preparing to leave the United States.

Throughout Norway there were many expressions of condolence for Lieut. Ellsworth, the Ohio aviator who accompanied Amundsen. Ellsworth's father, who helped finance the expedition, died in Italy while the world was wondering whether the North Pole flyers were dead or alive.

Ellsworth was greatly moved on his arrival at King's Bay to learn of his father's death. He was quoted as saying that all of the money coming to him from the estate of his father would be at the disposal of Amundsen for further exploration.

Early reports of Amundsen's experience do not indicate the expedition suffered hardships, although scientists here emphasized that the Amundsen feat required great fortitude and persistence.

Amundsen had not reached a decision whether to return to Lady Franklin Bay, 130 miles from King's Bay, for the airplane which he left there when the returning expedition boarded the Norwegian sealer. It was not thought here he would go to Lady Franklin Bay, but would send a salvage crew or request the Norwegian government to dispatch a cruiser to bring back the plane. There was another possibility that either the steamer Farm or Hobby, which aided Amundsen in getting started on his initial flight, would go to Lady Franklin Bay.

The view point of Norwegian scientists on Amundsen's experience were summed up by Dr. Skattum, president of the Norwegian Geographical Society.

"It was not expected," said Dr. Skattum, "that Captain Amundsen could land at the exact situation of the North Pole. The fact that he has been away 28 days proved that he has obtained useful observation data in spite of so great difficulties.

"It was a far easier task for him when he reached the South Pole. Then he had land all of the time."

ARRESTED, FINED AND SUED FOR DAMAGES

Harry R. Quinn of Newburgh was arrested Wednesday afternoon following a collision between his car and that of Vernon Styles at North street and Delaware avenue. Quinn was fined $2 for driving without a license when arraigned before Judge Coughlin in police court this morning. Quinn was then served with papers in a damage suit brought against him by Mr. Styles.

Richard Bove, a stranger picked up Thursday night on a charge of public intoxication, was fined $5 and payment of the fine was suspended.

Explorers Return Insures Success

From a Scientific Standpoint Says MacMillan—Twenty-Five Thousand Expected to Bid Farewell Saturday to Mac Millan and Party.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Wiscasset, Maine, June 19.—"We are all too happy for words to learn that Amundsen and his party have returned safely and we send to our fellow explorers our heartiest congratulations and good wishes."

Commander Donald Baxter Mac Millan, who is to leave here for his ninth exploration of the Arctic on Saturday, gave emphasis to his words by a hearty clap of his hands. His blue eyes twinkled and a smile brightened his bronze face.

"I always felt Amundsen would win out. I did not think there was any cause for anxiety until his food gave out.

"We can now go back to our original plans for scientific exploration of the vast unknown continent in the polar region.

"We can now sail on Saturday with our original purpose in mind without fearing that we had not done our duty by our fellow explorer.

"We intended to establish a base at Cape Columbia in the search for Amundsen. Now we will revert to our plan to establish a base at Cape Thomas Hubbard at the northern end of Axel Hieberg Island which is but a two hour flight from the largest unexplored area in the north.

"We shall proceed to Etah at the northern tip of Greenland which I consider as far as any ships can travel without serious danger. From the ships base the three naval amphibian planes will be flown 250 miles to an advance base for food and oil. Two planes will be left there, one at all times and another to be used as a shuttle with the planes at our advanced exploration point to carry supplies.

"What have I got to say about the report that Canada objects to landing planes in her territory or to the north. My reply to that is that I have heard nothing of the sort. We haven't received any complaint or warning from Canada.

"From a scientific standpoint the return of Amundsen and his party insures our expedition greater success. It was no secret that we had decided to sacrifice much in subordinating our plans to preparations for the search for Amundsen. Plans for this expedition have been long under way. The matter of fuel for the naval planes alone in the contemplated hunt for Amundsen was a serious problem."

Studies of Eskimo flappers in color photography, of "red" snow, Arctic poppies and roses and of new animal, bird and fish life in the frozen north will be one of the many features of Commander Donald B. MacMillan's ninth invasion of the Far North. Thousands gathered here today to bid MacMillan farewell.

Search will be made for a supposed "lost continent," supposed to be rich in coal and minerals, fertile with vegetation and flowers in Arctic summer and populated by animals and birds and possibly by human beings.

Peary reported a vast blossom-strewn waste near the North Pole but doubt exists among explorers and scientists whether it was merely a mirage or a deceptive ice pack so colored and constituted in certain periods of the year as to resemble land.

It was to determine, if possible, whether such an Arctic continent really exists that the National Geographic Society agreed to finance the MacMillan expedition to be led by New England's modern Viking.

Baseball will be introduced to the Eskimos by Maynard Owen Williams, special writer of the Geographic Society. Williams said today:

"We are going to organize a nine that will play at the top of the world. No danger of the game being called for darkness in Arctic summer. It ought to be easy to slide to base up there."

Every hotel is jammed to capacity here today and thousands are enroute. Prominent among the arrivals was Mrs. Robert E. Peary, widow of the explorer. It is expected 25,000 will be here tomorrow for the sailing.

The first event on the elaborate farewell program is scheduled for tonight when the crews of the exploration ships Peary and Bowdoin will be tendered a banquet.

INVESTIGATE DEATHS FROM RADIUM POISON

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Newark, N. J., June 19.—Six deaths said to have been caused by a slow working poison, a radium compound with which the victims worked, were being investigated by Essex county authorities today. All of the alleged victims worked in the plant of the United States Radium Corporation of America, of Orange, N. J.

The deaths attracted the attention of the county officials with the filing of a $75,000 damage suit against the company by Marguerite Carlough, a former employe of the plant. She alleges she had been poisoned by a substance used in making watch dials visible in darkness.

Kingston's Water Supply Will Be Adequate

Expert Engineers Will Make Survey of Water System and Provide Ample Facilities for Twenty-Five Years—Electric Pump Will Be Used Temporarily to Raise Pressure to High Points.

The board of water commissioners of the city are at present having a survey made of the water supply system of the city for the purpose of ascertaining what improvements are necessary to give relief to residents on the high points of the city, who during the sprinkling hours of the day get little or no water.

For some time this matter has been under consideration by the water board and in order to give immediate relief the board has ordered an electric pump which will be installed on the high pressure water main and will act as a booster pump when the pressure is low at certain hours of the day. This electric pump, which is expected to arrive within a week or ten days, will be immediately installed and will boost the pressure on the high points so that residents there will have water during the hours when the pressure is reduced through sprinkling use.

This pump will be installed on the water main at some designated point in the city and will raise the pressure on the high points. During the hours for sprinkling the residents on the high points, especially on Highland avenue and Clifton avenue extending over to West Chester street at times are unable to get any water.

The installation of the electric pump will remedy this condition and provide immediate relief to these sections of the city.

J. Waldo Smith in Charge.

The survey, which is being made for the water board by Sanborn & Bogart, hydraulic engineers, who have associated with them Thomas Wiggin, an expert on sanitation, is being made under the direction and supervision of J. Waldo Smith, one of the most expert engineers of the country today. Mr. Smith was chief engineer in charge of the construction of the Ashokan reservoir and other water projects of the city of New York and is considered one of the leading water works engineers in the country.

When the survey is completed and the report of the engineers is received by the board, the work of providing for the city's future water needs will be taken up by the board. Plans will be made to provide adequate water facilities for the city for the next twenty-five years.

About twenty years ago improvements were made to the water supply which were planned to take care of the future needs for some time. Since that time the city has grown, additional mains have been installed and extensions have been made. Additional pipe lines have been laid from the reservoirs to provide an additional supply of water to take care of the needs of the city but the time has arrived when extensive improvements must be made to give satisfactory service to water users. The present board has decided that before a large amount of money is expended experts should be employed to determine just what is necessary not only to provide for the present but also for the future.

With this idea in view the board has employed engineers to make a proper survey and on their report and recommendations work will be carried out.

May Build Additional Line.

It is likely that an additional pipe line will have to be built and if this is needed they will determine what size and kind should be constructed to take care of the city's water needs for the next twenty-five years. It is probable that the report of the engineers will be made in time to commence improvements either during the coming fall or next spring so that by another summer proper relief will be at hand.

The installation of the electric pump to boost the water pressure on the high points is in the nature of a temporary relief to those who are now deprived of adequate water during certain hours of the day when sprinkling is being done. The board has received complaints and petitions from residents residing on the high points asking relief and the board intends to give this necessary relief as soon as it can possibly be done. The pump will be used at certain hours of the day when the water pressure on the high points is low.

Police Strict About Parking

Will Enforce Existing Ordinances in Relation to Parking on Wall Street and Other Streets in Uptown Business Section.

On account of the congested condition of uptown streets by reason of increased parking of automobiles, particularly on Wall, North Front, Fair and Main streets, the police department in order to relieve the condition will begin a more rigid enforcement of existing ordinances relative to parking in this vicinity, such enforcement to continue until such time as the board of public works may pass other and more stringent ordinances.

With the two parks available for parking in the uptown section it would appear that the enforcement of the one hour rule would increase the use of both parks and at the same time provide parking space on the streets for those who intend to remain there but a short time. The public should bear in mind that the streets are primarily for moving traffic and while a limited amount of standing traffic is usually tolerated, when it becomes congested, the standing traffic must move to places where the congestion is not great.

To provide for this excess there have been provided two parks where vehicles may be parked for an unlimited time. The time has now arrived when the parks must be used to their capacity. Beginning today the police will be active in enforcin the existing ordinances relative to parking on the uptown streets.

Pierpont Morgan Babylonian collection, numbering several thousand cuneiform inscriptions and with other collections giving Yale university the largest number of unpublished tablets in the country, is expected to yield new light and fresh discoveries, making the time of Abraham, about 2,000 B. C., as familiar to this generation as history of a few centuries ago, Prof. Albert T. Clay, of the Yale archeology department, announced here.

Several generally accepted theories regarding the beginning of civilization have been upset by the cuneiform inscriptions so far deciphered, Professor Clay asserts. One of these is the belief that Abraham belonged to the dawn of civilization. Inscriptions at Yale show records of 20 Babylonian kings who preceded him, and show remarkable advances in natural culture.

Business Records Included.

Professor Clay, former president of the American Oriental society, has found on these tablets literary inscriptions, epics and hymns, prayers, omen and divination texts, syllabaries or dictionaries, and mathematical and medical treatises. Furthermore there are legal and business transactions recorded, documents and archives of the temples, personal and official letters and inscribed bricks.

"It is not generally known that Yale has one of the world's largest collections of cuneiform inscriptions," Professor Clay said. "It was through the munificence of the late J. Pierpont Morgan, who in 1910 established a chair of Assyriology at Yale in memory of his friend, William M. Laffan, the owner and editor of the New York Sun, that the creation of the Yale Babylonian collection was made possible.

"In 1921 it was magnificently augmented by the late Dr. James B. Niles, who bequeathed his collection of cuneiform inscriptions to Yale, where it had been previously deposited, together with a fund of $50,000 for its enlargement and publication. Including the gifts of several others, the Yale collection now numbers nearly 20,000 inscriptions. The Pierpont Morgan library Babylonian collection numbering several thousand inscriptions, is also deposited at Yale."

These inscriptions are being made accessible to scholars. The Yale Press is publishing three different series of texts, the Yale, Niles and Morgan series, as well as a series of oriental researches. Twelve volumes of texts have already appeared, and several others are in course of preparation.

In addition, several volumes of researches bearing upon these texts also have appeared. The publication of these volumes was made possible through funds given by Ogden H. Hammond, '93 S., and George A. Kohut.

Forty kings of Babylonia and Assyria are represented in the collection by their personal inscriptions, while many others are represented by objects dated in their reigns. No less than a dozen rulers are represented by inscribed terra cotta cones in the shape of huge, roughly made nails. These contain records of the kings' pious acts in reconstructing temples or erecting shrines.

Tablet Contains Laws.

One of the treasures of the Yale collection is a tablet containing laws which have proved to be a prototype of the Hammurabi code. This tablet belongs to the earliest of laws at present known. Yahweh is recorded as the author of Israel's laws, while Shamash is depicted in relief giving laws to Hammurabi. The tablet says the laws are those of Nisaba, a goddess, and Khani, a god.

The most notable literary production as yet discovered in Babylonia is the epic which recounts the exploits and adventures of Gilgamesh, one of the earliest kings of the land. This is known from an Assyrian version on twelve tablets from the library of Ashurbanipal (668-626 B. C.), now preserved in the British museum. Unfortunately, the tablets are so fragmentary that only about half the epic has been preserved.

The Yale collection possesses a tablet giving a Babylonian version of this great epic, written fifteen centuries earlier than the Assyrian. It is the third of the series, the second having been secured by the University of Pennsylvania. These tablets of the early version supply missing portions of the epic. Each tablet has a lump of clay on each side, in order to protect it from being injured while resting on the shelf in the libraries of antiquity.

Finally, several thousand legal and business documents, deeds, leases, contracts of almost every description, including marriage and dowry contracts, particularly agreements, promissory notes, mortgages and documents granting the power of attorney, concerning bankruptcy, inheritance and divorce are found in the collection.

REPORT GERMAN KAISER HAD 8,000 SPIES BEFORE THE WAR

Billets in Villages and Towns of Belgium Arranged for Three Years Prior to Invasion.

Liverpool.—Prof. Bernard John Wilden-Hart, who has made military intelligence in Europe a study, in a lecture here before members of the Liverpool Geographical society, asserted that for several years before the war Germany had 8,000 spies scattered at various points between Berlin and Brussels. The German army billets in Belgian towns and villages had been arranged and scheduled three years before a shot was fired in 1914, Professor Wilden-Hart asserted.

The lecturer, who was professor of English at the Imperial Japanese university, Nagoya, from 1909 to 1915, and who has written numerous works on the espionage systems in Russia, Germany, Japan, Poland and other countries, said the German naval plans concerning the battle of Jutland were ascertained by British intelligence officers 24 hours before the fight, and that as a matter of fact, the English fleet moved first.

For young men desiring a romantic, adventurous career the speaker recommended the intelligence service, and said there were plenty of jobs on the continent awaiting the right men.

There were more spies in Europe today, he said, than at any time prior to 1914.

Dig Wells to Supply Falls of Minnehaha

Minneapolis.—Picturesque Minnehaha falls, immortalized by Longfellow, will be saved by artificial means, undertaken by the local board of park commissioners.

Due to an abnormal deficiency in precipitation in recent years, Minnehaha creek, which supplies the waterfall, has suffered such a decreased flow as to make it impossible to sustain the falls, it was explained by Theodore Wirth, superintendent of the local park board.

As a remedy the park board has begun a project of supplying the water through the drilling of wells. An 800-foot well is being sunk in Minnehaha creek, Superintendent Wirth said, and it is hoped to strike a flowing well, but failing this, a pump will be installed. Should one well be insufficient, several others will be sunk.

Minnehaha falls has a beautiful 60-foot drop, and is about 45 feet wide.

Work on the project is expected to be completed by middle summer, Mr. Wirth said.

Buffalo Leads, Nashville Last, in School Costs

Washington.—Buffalo, N. Y., spends more per capita of average attendance for the maintenance of its public day schools than any other city in the United States. Its expenditure was $138.32 per pupil in 1924, as shown by statistical circular No. 4, just issued by the Department of the Interior, bureau of education. Springfield, Mass., was second in liberality with $123.70 per pupil in attendance. Nashville, Tenn., has relatively the cheapest school system in the group of cities of 100,000 inhabitants or more and spent only $35.74 per pupil in 1924. The average for all the cities of this group was $85.64.

Airplanes Will Serve New Gold-Mining Field

Vancouver, B. C.—Success in the use of airplanes to carry miners and supplies to mining districts in Alaska and elsewhere in the Pacific Northwest has resulted in plans being made here for reaching the Cassiar country of northern British Columbia this summer over air routes.

Reports of rich gold strikes in the Cassiar were confirmed at the start of winter. Canadian police placed a ban on adventurers making the journey.

Charming Individuality Expressed in This Hat

The large hat with brim that narrows at front and rear is one of the pleasing modes of the season. This hat, made of black hair, with black satin trimmings, will appeal to women who love large hats.

Fashions for Brides of Spring and Summer

While most of the new wedding gowns are made with long sleeves, those for an evening wedding are seen with lace sleeves half sleeves, or none. One rarely sees gloves, though a few follow a late Parisian fad in drawing long gloves which wrinkle over a tight sleeve.

A very young bride claims the privilege of wearing something less formal than satin, plain or brocaded. In this type of dress enchanting things have been designed by the most prominent artists. Gowns of sheer material, chiffon, georgette, net, crepe, are all shown among the latest models. Beaded gowns are still very good, and lace is lavishly used.

A one-piece frock of georgette, embroidered in beads, is a thing of clinging loveliness presented by Paul Caret in one of his most original models for an evening wedding. The skirt has the new slightly lifted line in front, where it is fastened by an ornament of pearls and brilliants, repeated in effect by large motifs of embroidery on the ends of the train, which is formed of three narrow scarfs of satin. The bodice is moderately decollete, the sleeves very short, and long mousquetaire gloves are worn. This bride will wear a crystal-edged veil of tulle covering her face, this fashion still being favored by the conservative.

A revival of the styles of the '60s is seen in some attractive wedding costumes—wide skirt, tight bodice, undersleeves, little lace-frilled nosegay and all. The later equally quaint style of a skirt ruffled from waist to hem, and short enough to agree with the mode of the moment, has a baby waist and tiny puffed sleeves. This is an engaging little frock for a bride of eighteen.

Enchanting Dinner Gown Departs From Satin, Crepe

An [illegible] dinner gown which [illegible] the fashionable satins [illegible] of white mousseline [illegible] one piece, and is [illegible] with a delicate all-over [illegible] silver and rhinestones. [illegible] of drapery is [illegible] large motif of the [illegible] placed low in front [illegible] slightly into fullness [illegible] the line of the hips.

Gold and silver are much used in both black and white. Some of the gowns elaborated in this manner are magnificent. A few are regal, with costly jeweled passementeries overlapping bands of gold and silver, sometimes used merely as a background. Large, oriental and fantastic designs are embroidered in silver and gold threads on evening gowns and wraps, giving an effect quite as fanciful and ornate as needlework from the Far East. It is not unusual to see strips of gold embroidered all over in rhinestones and applique in different ways.

Tailored Chiffon Frocks Among Spring Favorites

One of the outstanding phases of the modes of spring is the use of chiffon and similar fabrics in fashions that are distinctly tailored in appearance. The popular little two-piece model that might be said to dominate the styles of the present season has recently appeared in a totally different guise. Trim and tailored in line with its long tight or peasant sleeves and its skirt with an inverted plait in front it retains all the practical qualities of a jersey frock but has a certain femininity about it that is most engaging.

The distinctive feature of these tailored frocks of georgette is that in a number of cases they are fashioned of two thicknesses of the material. This does away with the transparent effect and brings out the becoming quality of the fabric.

Cameos

The word "cameo" is not the name of a gem. It is merely a method of cutting. In other words, any hard substance or gem can be made into a cameo, although usually onyx, sardonyx, agate and ivory are used.

EUROPEAN FINANCES.

The use of the $100,000,000 credit established by Morgan and Company for the protection of the French franc will avert temporarily at least a further break in that debased currency. It is merely a makeshift and Finance Minister Caillaux will have to expert all of the financial ability with which he is credited to avert a currency panic until the French people are willing to accept the inevitable and supplant their paper currency with hard money as the Germans have done.

France will undoubtedly attempt to do more financing in this country but President Coolidge has already arranged with the principal group of international money lenders that no further loans will be made until the French Government arranges to meet its obligations to the United States.

Meanwhile the announcement that Belgium is preparing to send a mission to call upon Secretary Mellon and discuss refunding her loans to the American Government will surprise none who is familiar with the recent financial affairs of that country. Last year Morgan and Company with their associates arranged for a $100,000,000 loan to Belgium. One half of the amount was subscribed and the bankers are now preparing to float the remaining $50,000,000. An announcement to this effect will be made within the next few weeks in all probability. There is a direct connection between the announcement that Belgium is prepared to talk business with our government and the fact that Morgan and Company are about to complete the loan. It is a part of the program worked out between the White House, State Department and the international bankers.

IDLENESS AS A GOAL.

A Chicago dispatch quotes Bishop E. H. Hughes of the Methodist Episcopal Church, when speaking on the subject of "Work," as saying that "the heresy that life began in a toilless Eden and that its goal is an idle Heaven has no religious or Biblical warrant."

Certainly the idea of "an idle Heaven" has no basis in reason or common sense. The tired and worn-out man may find grateful the sound of the passage, "they shall rest from their labors," but a little reflection will convince him that nothing could be more intolerable, more acutely miserable, than sitting with folded hands to all eternity. Life that is life inevitably involves both activity of interest and actual employment of some sort.

To "rest" from the "labors" of the spirit—the anxieties, fears, alarms, and devastating battles with temptation—can not involve a cessation of either intellectual interest or active employment, for such cessation for more than brief periods would virtually make of man a lifeless automaton. The universal ideal of Heaven is an ideal of final peace and happiness, but there can be no peace or happiness in a sluggish idleness that neither exercises the faculties nor performs any service to others. Though not new, the view of Bishop Hughes is logical and convincing.

The uses of the airplane continue to expand. Recently the news came that the French Premier has speeded in one to North Africa to look into a dragging French war with a stubborn chieftain before making announcement in Paris of a matured policy. And now the Belgrade correspondent of the London Morning Post tells of how a diamond merchant carrying gems was robbed and murdered by his secretary and the pilot of an airplane flying from Vienna to Budapest. According to the sensational story, the body was thrown overboard, and later, after the airplane had been destroyed, the secretary killed the pilot in order to be safer and to keep the whole fortune for himself. Obviously an airplane on high offers superior advantages for the staging of a murder in at least one particular. The chances for the early discovery of a body thrown from a flying plane into remote mountain woods are slim indeed.

Unless all signs fail rubber is about to take the place of oil as the great speculative commodity. The Department of Commerce is working night and day in the hope of stabilizing the price but the prospects as of the present, do not appear to be very good. Meanwhile it would be well for the public to examine with very great care any rubber "investments" that may be offered to them by a certain type of gentry who usually take advantage of such conditions.

That Body of Yours

WANTING TO LIVE.

One of our popular writers was pointing out recently that considering the number of people in the world, their cares, and worries, that a very small percentage indeed, decided to quit this life of their own accord. And when you think of it the record is remarkably good.

Some of our European research men have been making an extensive study of this matter of taking one's life. It was found that certain periods in the year for certain districts, showed an increase in the number of the cases. However the significant point about the whole matter was this, "the findings on the bodies of these unfortunate people furnished evidence, that almost without exception, that they were ill, and that self destruction was carried out when they were in a state in which they were scarcely able to control their actions, and that the results of this research constitute a confirmation of former inquiries, and show that on the bodies of these people, changes may be demonstrated, that explain directly or indirectly, the reason that they wanted to quit this world of ours."

And so as you and I look about us, and see the number of men and women carrying burdens of care and sorrow that seem too heavy to bear, and remember that with these burdens there is not the proper opportunities afforded with which to fight a real battle, the wonder is that men and women fight as well as they do. For whether one is wealthy or poor, cares come, and what one has with which to fight them is just the one thing, that is the strength of the body.

When one is bowed down with grief, with a slow illness, there is not the ordinary opportunities for having the mind occupied with the brighter things of life.

The entire body reflects the illness or grief, the blood becomes less pure, the intestine and liver sluggish, the appetite impaired. The brain, the mind, does its best, but it in turn becomes unable to function properly, and is unable to measure things, to see things at their real value, and thus control is lost. It is worth while therefore when one is sick and moody to try to bring an atmosphere of brightness, of hope, of actual help to them. They are entitled to it.

Today We Celebrate

BERENICE.

Berenice was one of the four wives of Ptolemy, the founder of the dynasty of the Lagidae, in Egypt and the mother of Ptolemy II called Philadelphus.

She had another son, Magas, by a former husband. This son was afterwards king of Cyrene.

FIRST COLONIAL CONGRESS.

The first Colonial Congress called for the purpose of considering a confederacy of the various American colonies, was convened in Albany, N. Y., on this date in 1754.

New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, Pennsylvania and Maryland were represented. In the prospect of war with France the British ministry had advised the colonists to hold a general convention to provide for the general defense. Going beyond the advice of the ministers the congress proposed a scheme of confederation which was the germ of the United States Constitution. Its author was Benjamin Franklin. The plan was finally rejected by the colonies because it was alleged, it gave too much power to the crown, and disapproved by the crown because it left too much authority to the people.

MAINE.

The first definite step towards the formation of Maine as a separate state, was taken 106 years ago today, when the Massachusetts legislature granted the petition of about 27 towns asking for separation. Under this separation act an election was held to name delegates to a convention in Portland and this body elected William King president, also appointing a committee to frame a constitution. In 1820 the United States Congress formally admitted Maine to the sisterhood of states.

Portland was the first capital, but in 1832 the seat of government was removed to Augusta, where it has since remained. The northeastern part of Maine was originally part of Acadia. After the Revolution the boundary line between Maine and New Brunswick was not definitely decided, and Maine had been a state for 22 years before the controversy was settled. The first permanent settlement in Maine was at Monhegan in 1622.

THE EVOLUTIONIST'S SIDE OF THE THEORY.

To the Editor of The Freeman.

Sir:—As a result of the trial of an evolutionist in Tennessee there is a lively interest in the theory of evolution at the present time. After reading the reasons which the legislators of Tennessee gave for prohibiting its teaching in their state's schools, and after hearing some unintelligent discussion of it by folks in this town, I feel that the meaning of the theory should be truthfully explained and would appreciate your publishing this letter.

Briefly, evolution is the progressive development of physical organism from lower to higher forms. Scientific study seems to show that all plants, animals and man have developed through the ages from one original bit of living matter, just as the many branches of a tree grow out from one central trunk. This original life from which all other forms have developed is another way of saying, "In the beginning God," because God is life. A false conception of evolution is the idea that it explains everything, even the origin of life. This is a misconception, because in reality evolution is the process by which life has developed, not the origin of that life. Scientists do not presume to explain the original life-cell; it can't be done with man's limited knowledge.

Another popular misconception of evolution is that man descended from apes. In the first place this is silly, because no form of life can have descended from its contemporaries. Evolutionists do believe, however, that present-day human beings have developed from ancient, less cultured men. No one who has read history can deny this evolution of primitive men into the civilized beings we of the twentieth century profess to be. To use the illustration of the tree again, man is one branch while apes are another.

The importance of understanding evolution lies in the fact that misconceptions of this theory tend to destroy belief in the Holy Bible. Instead of tearing down our religion, evolution is helping to give us a firmer hold upon our faith and our Bible. Science is concerned with the survival of the fittest; whereas religion is essential in explaining the arrival of the fittest. Biblical inconsistencies can be explained when one discovers more of the scientific truths and natural laws by which God runs the universe. Evolution as a process of growth, not as the origin of life, has no conflicts with the creation stories of Genesis, chapters one and two. The same is true when one discards the idea of man's ancestors being apes.

The process of evolution is an argument for God, because it shows that the universe moves with a purpose back of it all, a guiding hand which we call God. Evolution is not wholly mechanical, since it involves continual struggle, and this suggests the presence of a supreme consciousness which is one aspect of the Almighty God.

It is very probable, dear editor, that those who need these facts most will entirely overlook this letter, but perhaps some stimulating soul will read and be led to agree or disagree by answering in your columns.

Hopefully yours,

Thousands of Years of Prayers Answered

I met him some eighteen years ago in the Alps on the Great Saint Bernard, about ten miles from the top of the pass. Here I found my tall old monk. As I joined the group around him I heard him say to one of them:

"How much finer and better it is to cross the range up here by the Pass than to go through the smoky tunnel below. And even in snowstorms now it is safe. For you see that telephone on the wall. The wire goes to an inn ten miles lower down the pass. And in times of storm, when a traveler leaves the inn, they telephone up to us here and one of us goes down with the dogs. So we reach him before he is overcome."

"But are no lives lost in winter?" inquired a young American.

"No—not a life in many years." The tall old man was silent a moment. Then in a reverent tone he said, "For over a thousand years, my son, we have prayed for the safety of travelers here. And He has answered our prayers at last."

The smart young American asked, "Or was it the telephone?"

The old mountain climber turned and looked at the Yankee with quiet eyes. "Yes, my son—that is how God answered our prayers."—Ernest Poole in Hearst's International-Cosmopolitan.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

WISHING TO ESCAPE

When all the people have gone home the animals in the zoo talk to each other, sometimes they talk about the times they were free, sometimes they talk of what they like best about the zoo and about their own family ways—and sometimes they talk about the people who come to visit them, and laugh at the different ways people have.

"People say," remarked the Rocky Mountain Bear, "that we don't get any chance to do as we please when we're in the zoo. They say we aren't free. But I fooled them yesterday."

"You did, indeed," said Muff and Ruff in chorus. Muff and Ruff were two Russian bears who were neighbors of the Rocky Mountain Bear.

"And you gave me away," said the Rocky Mountain Bear. "But no matter, I had my little outing."

"I couldn't bear it when I saw you bend your wires and manage to escape," said Muff.

"And so we both growled as hard as we could," said Ruff.

"That was what made the keeper see what had happened," said the Rocky Mountain Bear. "He didn't know whether I was down in my cave or not."

"But we kept on growling," said Muff, "and he came back once more to see what had happened. My, we were envious."

"Oh yes, I had a fine walk and stroll around the park," said the Rocky Mountain Bear, "and when they came to catch me and bring me back they said that they were so frightened when they heard I had escaped.

"For they said my temper wasn't always as perfect as it might be, and so they were afraid! Ha, ha, growl, growl, I frightened them when I had my walk!

"I didn't do any harm, but I did what I pleased. I walked where I wanted to walk. I enjoyed myself. I fooled them yesterday, all right.

"It took eight of the creatures they call men to bring me back again. That was something for a Rocky Mountain Bear to boast about—eight men to bring him home!

"Oh," Said Mr. Gray Fox, "I Wish I Had Got Out."

"And so, Muff and Ruff, though you were so envious you made my walk shorter yesterday by letting the keeper know something was up, or rather, out, still I had a fine, free time, and I fooled the keeper."

"You frightened them, too, you lucky bear," said Muff and Ruff.

"Oh," said Mr. Gray Fox, "I wish I had got out of the zoo. I'm going to try. I'm going to climb up the side of my cage, and I'll escape. I will."

"I don't believe you will," said Mr. Red Fox. "The keepers weren't on the lookout for the bear doing this, but they are on their guard about you. They know that a gray fox will try to get away by climbing and climbing over the top of anything he can, a tree, a fence, or anything.

"Now we would try to escape through one of the entrances to our home. We always have three entrances so we can get out of one doorway in our hole-home if we are attacked from one of the other two. You don't care about digging and burrowing—you would rather climb. You're not as clever as we are. You are not nearly so foxy."

"Oh," said Mr. Gray Fox. "I know that you are very clever and tricky and deserve that name, but I am worse than you are! There! As I said before, I don't care about anything. If I were free I would only think of myself. Here I only think of myself.

"I don't think of Mrs. Gray Fox or the little ones. I only think of myself. I hate the keeper. I hate my family.

"No. I'm the gray fox, the sly, treacherous gray fox. Just now I don't believe I will try to escape for I am sleepy.

"But if ever I do you can think of me as out in the great world, perhaps back from my own old home—being as cross and selfish as I was here in the zoo, and not feeling sorry about it in the least."

In and Out

A father took his son of four years to the incubator in the cellar to see the eggs hatch.

Said dad, impressively: "Isn't it queer how the little chicks get out of the shell?"

"Huh," replied the youngster, "what gets me is how they get in there."—The Progressive Grocer.

COOL DRINKS

Many delicious summer drinks may be bought already prepared in bottles and with these and home-prepared grapejuice and shrub one has quite a good variety; but at times when entertaining one likes something a little different from the ordinary.

Fruit Punch.—Take one cupful each of the following fruits cut fine: Pineapple, raspberries, bananas and skinned grapes, if in season. To the juice of four lemons and eight oranges add a quart of freshly made and cooled tea. To two quarts of cold water add enough sugar sirup to sweeten. Mix all together and let stand until ready to serve (in the ice chest), then add two quarts of charged water and ice. Garnish with maraschino cherries.

Fruit Punch No. 2.—Take one can of grated pineapple and three cupfuls of water, boil together twenty minutes, then strain through a jelly bag, pressing out all the juice. Cool and add the juice of six lemons, ten oranges, one quart of strawberry juice or currant, or grape juice, three cupfuls of sugar sirup, one cupful of freshly made tea; cool and add four quarts of water and one bottle of charged water when ready to serve. Both of these punches serve two dozen people.

Punch a la Paris.—Take one quart each of ginger ale and grape juice, the juice of three lemons and three oranges, one cupful of sugar—more if needed—two tablespoonfuls of grated cucumber rind. Serve in tall glasses.

Serve iced coffee with whipped cream and powdered sugar; iced tea with any acid fruit like a slice of lemon, orange or pineapple.

Prepare chocolate, using four squares of chocolate, grated, to one pint of boiling water; melt the chocolate over hot water and cook in the boiling water ten minutes. Add one pint of scalded milk, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt and a teaspoonful of vanilla with one-half cupful of sugar. Beat well, chill and serve topped with whipped cream on which is sprinkled a bit of grated sweet chocolate.

Parking Problem At Public Meeting

fore the board of public works and file board with it.

Lasher's Suggestion.

President Charles A. Lasher of the Chamber of Commerce said what that organization was interested in was some means of regulating parking in the entire city and the routing of traffic through the city. He believed the best plan would be to appoint a citizens' committee and have it devise some plan and then present it for discussion.

Hoffman Satisfied.

Secretary John J. Linson at the request of Chairman Greenwell reported that he had received a telephone message from former Sheriff Henry J. Hoffman stating he would be unable to attend the meeting but found present conditions on John street satisfactory.

William O'Reilly said he favored leaving John street as it was.

Coe Offered Resolution.

Secretary Louis S. Coe of the Chamber of Commerce said auto traffic was one of the most trying problems facing any city at the present time and he believed plans should be adopted that would not only be workable now but would meet future auto traffic growth. He believed a committee should be appointed who would give the matter serious study and consideration, and offered a resolution that such a committee be appointed.

Mayor Block Explains.

Mayor Block said that what the meeting had been called for was to discuss the uptown parking problem and ascertain what plans, if any, the uptown merchants had to offer for solving the question. Personally he had no objection to a committee being appointed and considering the entire question but thought there was enough of a representative gathering of uptown business men present to solve the problem at once.

Auto Club Favor Committee.

Dr. H. F. Meinhardt, secretary of the Auto Club of Ulster county, said that representing the Auto Club he was in favor of a committee being appointed and for that reason would second the Coe resolution.

Fire Chief Murphy Talks.

Fire Chief Joseph L. Murphy, who was present at the meeting with Chief of Police J. Allan Wood, was called upon by the chairman and said that a time limit for parking would help some as in case of an emergency the owner of a parked car would be more easily found to move his car. The main trouble was racing of automobiles to the fire. They would either shoot ahead of the fire apparatus or follow it closely and then park so close that they interfered with the work of the department. He said there was an ordinance now in force that prohibited following a fire truck within six hundred feet but with a limited police force it was practically impossible to enforce it.

Chief Murphy said they were now routing the fire apparatus so as not to pass through John street or Main street unless absolutely necessary.

Trolley Passengers Need Relief.

George R. Whittaker, of the Kingston Consolidated Railroad, said that from figures compiled by the company it was shown that about 150 people every ten minutes were discharged from trolley cars in the uptown business district on a Saturday night. Experts who have studied the question state that time limit parking was not enforceable owing to the fact that to strictly enforce it would require an exceptionally large police force.

Loop Trough Wall Street.

He brought out also that if the road is allowed by the public service commission to abandon the greater part of the Colonial Division, that it was contemplated making a loop through the uptown business section. Trolley cars would run through Fair street into North Front street on the Kingston City Division as at present, and then would swing into Wall street onto the Colonial tracks and run as far as Main street and then through Main street to Fair street.

Used Street for Visiting.

Mr. Whittaker said he had noticed that the greatest trouble on Wall street was due to the fact that the local residents used the street for front porch parking. They would drive up as early as 6:30 o'clock Saturday evening, park their car at the curb and let it stand there until late at night while the owner visited. As a result the greater part of Wall streeet was taken up by these parkers and it interfered with business.

A One Hour Trip.

As a result traffic was so congested, he said, that it took one hour for a resident of Ponckhockie to travel to Wall street by trolley car. This was not fair to the trolley passenger, who was entitled to being carried uptown on schedule time.

Where People Come From.

Mr. Whittaker said that according to figures 70 per cent of those who go to the congested district were carried there by trolley cars and they were entitled to some consideration and not be obliged to lose time by traffic congestion caused by auto parking.

Vote on Coe Resolution.

A vote on the Coe resolution was then called for and 16 voted in favor of it and none against. There were a number who did not vote.

Judge James Jenkins, corporation counsel, suggested that each organization interested name a committee of one or more and file the names with the secretary of the board of public works.

Sheppard's Resolution.

Mr. Sheppard offered a resolution that the committee be appointed by the mayor, which was seconded by Mr. Coe.

Charles L. McBride thought the committee should be limited in number so as to get action.

After some discussion the Sheppard resolution was adopted by a vote of 8 to 3, with a number not voting.

Comerford Offers Resolution.

Mr. Comerford offered a resolution that the whole matter of uptown parking be referred back to the board of public works to decide as it saw fit, which was seconded by Mr. Eltinge.

This was also adopted by a vote of 10 to 3 with a number not voting.

Herzog's Resolution.

Following some more discussion of the situation M. H. Herzog said that as it seemed to be the open season for resolutions he would introduce one, and moved that the board of public works adopt an ordinance prohibiting parking on Wall street, Main street, North Front street, Clinton avenue to Main street, and Fair street, for more than one-half hour and that the chief of police be instructed to enforce it.

It was promptly seconded and adopted by a vote of 13 to 1.

"How About No Parking,"

A motion to adjourn was offered by Mr. Eltinge but before it was put to a vote Commissioner Fessenden of the board of public works asked what the merchants thought about allowing no parking on Wall street.

Mr. Wonderly said he had spoken to several about that matter and favored no parking on Wall street on Saturday afternoons and evenings.

Frank T. Pitts said he favored no parking on Saturday afternoons and evenings.

W. H. Rudderham of the Van Wagenen Company said he did not approve of the suggestion as it would interfere with tourist trade in the summer.

Mr. Eltinge again moved to adjourn and it was carried, leaving the question of "No parking on Wall street" unsettled.

LIBERIAN MISSIONARY AT HOLY CROSS CHURCH

Next Sunday morning the preacher at the 10:30 a. m. Mass at Holy Cross Church will be the Rev. Herbert Hawkins, O. H. C., of Mosanbolahun, Liberia. Father Hawkins will speak of the interesting missionary enterprise conducted by the Order of the Holy Cross, the Mother House of which is at West Park, among the Gizi tribe, in the hinterland of Liberia. The Holy Cross Fathers were assigned missionary work in a vast territory by the bishop of Liberia who had been petitioned by the king of the Gizi for Christian missionaries.

Five years ago Father Hawkins and the first contingent of the Order began their work as Mosanbolanun by building their monastery, then their hospital and dispensary work, then their school, and recently a church. The Order aims at effecting the conversion of their spiritual charges through simply living the Christian life among them, and by their corporal acts of mercy, rather than by the usual methods of missionaries; instructing such as may come to them by attraction to the Christian life. In September more missionaries from the Order will go out and work at two more centers will be begun.

USES OF WEATHER FORECAST VARIED

Apparently No Limit to Useful Application of Official Prognostications.

Washington.—There is apparently no limit to the practical uses that may be made of forecasts and weather data generally. The Corpus Christi station of the weather bureau of the United States Department of Agriculture reports two unusual instances:

A teacher of expression planned an open-air recital. As her pupils were small children whose voices were weak, she ascertained from the weather bureau office the probable wind direction during the evening of the recital and placed the audience to leeward of the performers, who were heard without difficulty.

Trainers of fox hounds frequently call on this station to learn the probability of fog or dew in the early hours of the next morning. As hounds work best on still, damp mornings, such times are selected for sending them out in quest of coyotes.

Helps Candy Maker.

A local candy manufacturer at Augusta, Ga., found that on certain days the hard candies, that are very popular at this time, would "sweat" and lose their luster when laid out on the trays to harden. On the advice of the weather bureau official the candy company purchased a sling psychrometer and is making practical experiments in insuring humidity in its factories. While it is likely that the company will eventually install air-conditioning apparatus, it is now producing these candies satisfactorily and with little added expense by making them only on days when the humidity is low.

The owner of stone quarries in Nebraska reports, through the Lincoln station, that forecasts are especially needed before heavy blastings, as stone brought down just before a rain or snow storm prevents the ground from drying under the shot, and the men have to work in the mud. Again, it is difficult to finish loading a shot after rain begins. Therefore, in wet weather the men ask at night, "Will we work tomorrow?" and the engineers, "Shall we fire up in the morning?" Such questions are decided by the forecast.

Watched by Ministers.

Ministers keep an anxious eye on the weather, as it frequently influences the size of their congregation. The pastor of one of the largest churches in Canton, N. Y., consults the forecasts for another reason—to save coal. In arranging for heating his church for Sunday service, he calls the local office of the weather bureau for the forecast made Saturday morning and probable temperature during the night and Sunday morning. He then instructs the janitor as to time of starting fires and amount of heat required. In this way a more satisfactory temperature is provided and fuel is saved.

Finds Historic Church Papers in Unused Desk

New York.—In a drawer of an old desk, among discarded Christmas tree ornaments, at St. James' Lutheran church, historic records, some of them declared to be priceless, have been found by the pastor of the church, Rev. Mr. William F. Sunday. He has been unable to explain their presence there.

The authenticity of the find is guaranteed by the National Lutheran council. Most valued of the papers is the original ordination certificate of Rev. Justus Falckner, said to be the first clergyman regularly ordained in the western world.

The ordination took place on November 24, 1703, at the Swedish Lutheran Gloria Dei church, in Wicaco, Pa., now part of Philadelphia.

Other documents discovered and placed in a vault by Doctor Sunday include a petition of the Lutheran church to Thomas Dongan, governor of the colony prior to 1688, in which the congregation asks for immunity from taxation, on the ground that "those of the Calvinist opinion are exempted." There also is a letter dated October 27, 1704, certifying to the character of Rev. Mr. Falckner and asking aid from the Church of England for his support.

Longfellow All Wrong; Hesperus Never Did Sink!

Boston.—The schooner Hesperus, made forever famous by Longfellow's ballad, "The Wreck of the Hesperus," was not wrecked at all. Instead of going to its doom on the reef of Norman's Woe, the vessel lay in safety in Boston harbor and suffered only the breaking of a bowsprit when buffeted by the gusts which reached it.

The historical mistake is revealed in a study of newspaper files of the period of the great gale which inspired the poet.

On December 17, 1839, the newspapers printed an account of a sad disaster, telling how 17 bodies were washed ashore. In the same column was a paragraph telling how a gust drove the Hesperus from its moorings in Boston harbor against the ship William Badger, carrying away its bowsprit. A trifling misfortune like this won the schooner Hesperus undying fame. Perusal of Longfellow's diary for the 17th shows that he must have read both items and confused them.

RICHARD GATLING

RICHARD GATLING was inventor of the modern type of machine gun. There were guns, before that, which fired more than a single volley, but none could approach the Gatling for efficiency.

Gatling was born September 12, 1818, in North Carolina, son of a wealthy planter with an inventive sort of mind. Young Richard had such a good education that by the time he was seventeen he was intellectually far beyond most grown men. With his father, he perfected a machine to sow cotton seed, and for many years afterwards, while his work carried him about the country and at last to St. Louis, he kept inventing farming machines. A steam plow had great possibilities; planting and thinning machines almost revolutionized farming. He invented a screw propeller for steamboats, only to find Ericsson had secured a patent for the same idea a few days before. He studied medicine for a time.

Then, with the outbreak of the Civil war, he turned his thoughts to military weapons and made the first machine gun. It fired some 350 shots a minute and was the marvel of all who saw it. But the ordnance department, for some unknown reason, refused even to look at it. General Butler thought enough of it to buy a dozen with his own money and use them, however. But it was some time after the war, that congress consented to use the gun (perfected then to a speed of almost a thousand shots a minute). Since then it has been used all over the world. Of course, it is obsolete now.

Gatling lived until 1903.

YOUR Last Name

IS IT COLFAX?

WILLIAM COLFAX, one of the earliest settlers of Weathersfield, Conn., was the ancestor of the Colfaxes in this country. He was of pure English stock, and regarded as typical of the stock that made New England colonists noted for their integrity and hardiness.

He was the grandfather of John Colfax of New London, Conn., who, by his wife, Anne Latimer, had William Colfax, known later as General Colfax, who was captain of Washington's bodyguard, and took a prominent part in the Revolution. He was a man of many graces and much personal charm, as well as one of the bravest of fighters. And it is said that "Lady" Washington was particularly fond of his society. President Washington always knew that his wife would be treated with the utmost courtesy and as befitted the first lady of the land when General Colfax was one of their guests. And in the Colfax family today is treasured a curious little bag knitted of cotton thread, which was made by Mrs. Washington as a holder for General Colfax's cue when it was not in use.

H. Schuyler Colfax was vice president under Grant.

TREAT—The founder of the Treat family in this country was Robert Treat, born near Taunton, Somerset county, England, in 1622. He was colonial governor of Connecticut. His father was Richard who, with his wife, Alice Gaylord Treat, settled in Watertown, Mass., in 1635.

FALKENBERG—The Falkenberg family is of Germanic origin, although their German blood is very liberally diluted with Anglo-Saxon stock at the present time.

The founder of the family was Henry Jacob Falkenburg, who came from Holstein, near Denmark, and settled in New Jersey, where his descendants have always been prominent.

Bryan to Darwin On Evolution

The Commoner Criticises Famous Doctrine and Deplores Method by Which Evolutionists Become Exalted Over Science to the Exclusion of Religion.

William Jennings Bryan, writing in the current issue of The Forum, says:

In the June Forum, Professor Fairfield Osborne assumed to speak for the earth, and as its interpreter, administed a rebuke to me in its name. Those who are unacquainted with the sublime self-confidence of the evolutionists, may be surprised at this presumptiousness, but compared with other illustrations of conceit, the professor is humility itself. The more inflated of his class do not hesitate to claim an infallibility which they deny to the Bible, and think themselves better informed on ethics than Christ. One of these, speaking at Helena, Montana, not long ago, boasted that science (acting, of course, through scientists) had 'discovered incentives to righteousness that Jesus did not know.' A man who can teach the Savior morals must be quite a man.

Professor Osborne's excuse for conferring on me the distinction he does by linking my name with his, is set forth in the following words: "'The real question is, did God use evolution as His plan? If it could be shown that man, instead of being made in the image of God, is a descendant of the beasts, we would have to accept it, regardless of its effect, for truth is truth and must prevail. But when there is no proof, we have a right to consider the effect of the acceptance of an unsupported hypothesis.' Solemn pledge of William Jennings Bryan, 'New York Times,' Sunday, February 26, 1922."

If the professor's object had been to enlighten me and thus lead me out of error into a knowlegde of the truth, his act would have been gracious and his purpose laudable, even though he gave the letter to the public without mailing it to me. He denies himself credit for any altruistic purpose, however, when he confesses that he has no hope whatever of benefiting me. He says, "To these serious and earnest seekers after the truth, from 500 B. C to the present time, we have the contrasting attitude of the Great Commoner; if all the evidence for the truth were piled as high as Ossa upon Pelion; if proof were heaped upon proof, the truth would not prevail with him, because all the natural avenues of the truth are tightly closed."

I quote his language not for the purpose of showing the tolerant spirit of this eminent scientist, but rather to explain why I do not attempt to defend myself I could not assume an open-minded attitude without seeing to question his veracity My only recourse, therefore, is to defend that great multitude of believers in the Bible, for whose intelligence he has the same contempt that he expresses for mine, but whom he has not yet specifically mentioned by name and put beyond the pale of reason.

Do those who reject evolution as an unproven hypothesis, deserve the anathemas which he heaps upon them? Are they unreasonable in refusing to accept, as conclusive, the evidence offered by evolutionists in support of a proposition that links every living thing in blood relationship to every other living thing—the rose to the onion, the lily-of-the-valley to the hog-weed, the eagle to the mosquito, the mocking bird to the rattlesnake, the wolf to the lamb, the royal palm to the scrub oak, and man to all? Surely, so astounding a proposition as that embodied in the evolutionary hypothesis should be supported by facts before it becomes binding upon the judgment of a rational being.

It is not unusual for evolutionists to declare that their hypothesis is as clearly established as the law of gravitation or the roundness of the earth. How can they defend such a statement or even make it in good faith? Any one can prove to the satisfaction of everyone that matter attracts matter; that anything heavier than air, when thrown up into the air, will fall to the ground. There can be no rejection of a truth that each one can demonstrate for himself. And so with the roundness of the earth; it is no longer a hypothesis,—anyone can demonstrate the truth of this by traveling around the earth as millions have.

But how about the doctrine that all of the species (Darwin estimated the number at from two to three million,—the lowest estimate is one million, about a half million of which have been tabulated) by the operation of interior, resident forces came by slow and gradual development from one or a few germs of life, which appeared on this planet millions of years ago,—how many millions is a matter of speculation, the estimates varying according to the vigor of the guesser's imagination and the number of ciphers he has left in his basket? Can that proposition be demonstrated by every one like the law of gravitation or the roundness of the earth? On the contrary, no one has ever been able to trace one single species to another. Darwin admitted,—even expressed surprise and disappointment,—that no species had ever been traced to another, but he thought his hypothesis should be accepted even though "missing links" had not been found. He did not say link, as some seem to think, but links. If there is such a thing as evolution, it is not just one link,—the link between man and the lower forms of life,—that is missing, but all the millions of links between millions of species. Our case is even stronger; it has been pointed out that evolution, if there is such a force, would act so slowly that there would be an infinite number of links between each two species; or a million times a million links in all, every one of which is missing.

Thomas Huxley also asserted that no species had ever been traced to another, and while a friend of Darwin's, declared that until some species could be traced to another, Darwin's hypothesis did not rise to the dignity of a theory.

Professor William Bateson, a London biologist, prominent enough to be invited to cross the Atlantic and speak to the members of the American Society for the Advancement of Science, assembled at Toronto two years ago last Desember, in discussing evolution, took up every effort that had ever been made to discover the origin of species, and declared that every one had failed—every one He still asserted faith in evolution in spite of the failure, but in doing so, he only showed how much easier it is for some scientists to have faith along their own line of work than along religious lines.

Professor Osborne is so biased in favor of a brute ancestry, and so anxious to substantiate his claims to jungle blood, that he exultantly accepts as proof the most absurd stories. When a few bones and a piece of skull are fashioned into a supposed likeness of pre-historic animal, described as an ape-man, he falls down before it and worships it, although it contains a smaller percentage of fact than the one-half per cent of alcohol permitted in a legal beverage. Each new exhibit,—no matter how largely the product of an inflamed imagination,—lifts him to a new altitude of exultation, and each one in itself furnishes him sufficient foundations for unchangeable convictions; and yet, in spite of his doubled and redoubled certainty, he grasps at each new bit of evidence, no matter how frail and flimsy it is, as a drowning man clutches at a straw.

His latest "newly discovered evidence" is a long lost witness captured in Nebraska. He would probably have declared it "irrefutable" even if it had been found in some other state, all the evidence on his side seems "irrefutable" to him,—but the fact that it was found in Nebraska, my home state for a third of a century, greatly multiplied its value. Some one searching for fossils in a sand hill came upon a lonely tooth, no other tooth was nigh "to reflect back its blushes or give sigh for sigh." The body of the animal had disappeared and all the other pieces of "unperishable ivory" had perished; not even a jawbone survived to supply this Sampson of the Scientific World with a weapon to use against the Philistines of today. But a tooth in his hand is, in his opinion, an irresistible weapon.

The finder of this priceless tooth, conscious that it could impose upon but a few, even among those who prefer speculation to reason, wisely chose Professor Osborne. He has hastily summoned a few congenial spirits, nearly as credulous as himself, and they held a post mortem examination on the extinct animal, which had one time been the proud possessor of this "infinitesimal" and "insignificant" tooth. After due deliberation, they solemnly concluded and annouced that the tooth was the long looked-for and eagerly longed-for missing link which the world awaited.

The professor's logic leaks at every link, but is no worse than his boon companions who, having rejected the authority of the word of God, are like frightened men in the dark, feeling around for something that they can lean upon. True science is classified knowledge and is of incalculable use to man. Give science a fact and it is invincible. But no one can guess more wildly than a scientist, when he has no compass but his imagination, and no purpose but to get away from God. Darwin uses the phrase "we may well suppose" eight hundred times and wins for himself a high place among the unconscious humorists by his efforts to explain things that are not true. Evolution is a tragedy as well as a comedy. It is a calamity to the nation that highly educated men, many of them educated at the expense of the toiling masses, should while away their precious time in idle speculation instead of devoting themselves to the serious problems that demand solution. It is a serious thing to turn the attention of students from preparation for large service to a guessing match as to which of the brute creation is nearest kin to them by blood. It is scarcely less than criminal to rob the students of their heavenly vision and chill their spiritual enthusiasm. Shakespeare counts the stealing of honor a greater theft than the stealing of money. If so, how shall we characterize the offense of the teacher, however well meaning he may be, who shakes his students' faith in the word of God and furnishes them no moral standard to take its place.

The evolutionists build a philosophy of life on a brute hypothesis, wholly unproved, and then proceed to eliminate every vital part of the Bible because inconsistent with the hypothesis which they have adopted. Evolution has no place in it for the miracle or the supernatural; hence, evolutionists' eliminate the record of man's creation by separate act in God's image, as a part of a divine plan and for a purpose. They next eliminate the supernatural birth and resurrection of the Saviour. They rob Him of the glory of a virgin birth, of the majesty of His deity and mission, and of the triumphs of His resurrection. Evolution explains man as the climax of a process in which he has risen through the killing off of the weak—an hypothesis which, if carried to its conclusion, would condemn pity and sympathy as mischievous interferences with a cruel law by which, not the fittest but the fiercest and the most unmerciful survives.

Evolutionists are iconoclasts; they are bent on ridding the world of religion which they regard as a superstition. One professor in a prominent women's college in New England recently sent me a series of questions proposed for discussion. One of them read: "Is religion an obsolescent function, which should be allowed to atrophy quietly, without arousing the passionate prejudice of outworn superstition?"

And then they dare to belittle the intelligence and deny the rights of those who believe that the Lord Jesus Christ, our crucified and risen Saviour, "the greatest fact in history" and "the growing figure of all time," is the world's only hope of righteousness and peace, in the individual, in the nation and throughout the world.

Hashed Beef on Toast

Chop a quantity of cold roast beef rather fine, season well with pepper and salt. To each pint of meat add a level teaspoon of flour. Stir well and add a small teacupful of soup stock or water. Put in covered saucepan and let simmer for 20 minutes. Serve on toast in hot dish.

A GOOD way to disguise leftover beef and at the same time set before the family an appetizing dish is to serve Hashed Beef on Toast. Of course, the toast will be best when it's made of

One of the finest catches of trout seen this season was shown on Tuesday by "Ted" Cleaveland; thirty-four real beauties, among them several natives, which seem to be getting scarce in our streams here.

Odd Use for Elephants

Elephants were used to keep the crowd of curious natives from the airplane of an air exploring party in India recently, but the animals had to be watched to keep them from sitting on the plane.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

HUMAN WEATHERCOCKS

IF YOU are given to the minute observation of humans, their nervous shiftings from pillar to post, and their uncertain flutterings from flower to flower, like butterflies in sunny weather, perhaps you have asked yourself what becomes of them when the storms come and the cold north winds blow.

Turn where you may, you will see these gaudily attired weathercocks fluctuating with the passing breeze, never at rest except in a gale, and then trembling under intense excitement because they are forced temporarily to remain stationary.

They seem always to be at the turning point of some wonderful career, but never quite able to get across the line.

But nothing matters to these human weathercocks, so long as they are having a good time away from responsibility.

Heartaches of doting fathers and tears of solicitous mothers give them no pang of remorse, no thought of the future.

They have no fear of the lean days of winter, when the years shall begin to rust the luster of their eyes and crook their proud shoulders with burdens they will be compelled to bear.

To the world and its enterprises, these weathercocks contribute nothing that endures over night, except, perhaps, the heaped-up wrecks upon the roofs of time, which serve as a warning to those who are in the race to win, resolved to leave behind them a glorious light which shall illuminate the paths of others and cheer them on to noble endeavor.

WHO SAID

"The duties of government are paternal."

WHILE many persons will disagree with this statement as smacking too much of autocracy, when they consider the life and achievements of the man who uttered it they will realize that he meant that government should be paternal in the sense that it should care for and protect its citizens, not that it should rule them with an iron rod.

The life of William Ewart Gladstone is the life of one of the greatest and one of the most beloved statesmen that England has produced.

Born in the city of Liverpool, of Scottish parents, Gladstone began his political career in 1833, and up to the time of his death in 1898 he was ever active in the national affairs of Great Britain. He was one of the greatest orators England ever produced. His style was kindly and he seldom resorted to satire or invective to prove his point.

The two great aims of this statesman were to enfranchise the common people of England and to secure home rule for Ireland. The first aim was achieved and the second almost met with success when old age claimed the man who, in his vigor, had battled so hard for self-government in the Emerald Isle.

While Gladstone displayed wonderful powers in handling the internal affairs of England, he was exceedingly weak in his conduct of the international relations of the country. The American Civil war was fought during the time when Gladstone was a prominent figure in English politics. He took the stand that the Confederacy would win and even made the statement that the federal forces could never conquer the South.

Gladstone was an extensive writer and speaker and collections of his works have been published. He died at his home, Hawarden Castle, May 19, 1898.—Wayne D. McMurray.

Pleasant Prospect

"Well, how's trade?" inquired an old merchant of a young man who had just been taken into partnership with his father. "Very good," replied the young man. "I think father will soon be earning enough so I can retire."

SOMETHING COMING IN

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

OF ALL the comfort you can get
In any way you ever met,
To make a fellow feel inside,
And up and down and through and through,
Secure and sort of satisfied,
There's nothing that can comfort you
Exactly like a little tin,
Like having something coming in.

There's lots of joy a man can buy,
And so he should, and so do I.
But, after all, I never found
A greater comfort anywhere,
Although I've looked a lot around,
Than putting what I had to spare
Of money where it would begin
To bring me something coming in.

Who makes his money easily,
Or makes it hard, it seems to me,
Has ev'ry reason he should lay
A little of his money by;
If easy, for a harder day;
If hard, because he ought to try
A little greater ease to win
And have some money coming in.

You'll find a lot of tinsel toys
Along the road, and tinsel joys.
But, for a pleasure that will last,
When harder days are right ahead
And days of easy youth are past,
There's not a thing, as I have said,
Like just to sit and smoke or spin
And have some money coming in.

Mothers Cook Book

I've whiled away dyspeptic hours with crabs in marble halls
And in the lowly cottage I've experienced codfish balls.
But love never found a viand that could so ally all grief
And soothe cockles of the heart like rare roastbeef.

A FEW DON'TS

DON'T wear uncomfortable shoes about your work. Painful feet are the basis of much irritability and unpleasantness.

Don't forget to dash on cold water when a little hot grease is spilled on the floor or table. It prevents the fat from sinking into the grain of the wood, and can be easily removed at once.

Don't pour boiling water over fine china or glass. It may not seem to hurt it but it is apt to drop in pieces when least expected.

Don't let food of any kind dry on the baking dishes. Turn a little water into the dish; if an egg dish, use cold water; other foods will soak best in hot water.

Don't lay greasy spoons or utensils on the table or stove; keep a tin tray for holding all such utensils; this will save cleaning.

Don't pour boiling water on soiled dishtowels; the grease, if any, will be set in them. Soak in cold water and plenty of soap, then wash in hot water and boil.

Don't put tin dishes away until you are sure they are perfectly dry.

Don't forget to use the little "mend-its" which may be found at any ten-cent store. You can thus prolong the life of a favorite dish even after it has sprung a leak or two.

Don't touch fish with steel knives or forks. They impart an unpleasant flavor.

Don't salt meat before cooking unless you want to draw out all the juices and flavor. Add seasoning when the meat is well seared over.

Don't forget to put all blood-stained garments into cold water. If a drop of blood is dropped on woolen, cover it at once with dry starch. The starch will absorb the blood and when brushed out after drying the spot will be gone.

Crankcase Oil Reclaimed

Research workers of the General Electric company recently have developed a method of reclaiming motor oil which, it is said, permits the original filling of oil to be used for the life of the car, says Popular Science Monthly. This system is said to remove the road dust, carbon and other impurities that the oil collects in use. Also the process is said to remove, along with the dust and carbon, certain components of the oil that are useless for lubrication.

The American Legion

(Copy for This Department Supplied by the American Legion News Service.)

JAMES F. BARTON ASSUMES NEW JOB

James F. Barton, formerly adjutant of the Iowa department of the American Legion, has assumed his duties as assistant national adjutant. Barton took over a large part of the routine duties of the adjutant's office.

In this way, National Adjt. Russell Creviston is left free to devote more of his time to the $5,000,000 endowment fund which the Legion is raising for the disabled and the orphans of the World war. He had been handling the duties of the national adjutancy and of the executive secrotaryship of the endowment fund.

With the extension of the campaign for the endowment to every state in the Union, the pressure of duties of the executive secretaryship became greater and he found it impossible to continue to perform the duties of the two positions. Barton's appointment relieved him of part of the load and gave him more time for field work.

Barton has long been active in Legion work. Members of the Iowa department give him much of the credit for the remarkable record which that department has made. He served as adjutant of the department from the fall of 1920 until his transfer to national headquarters.

James F. Barton.

The new assistant national adjutant's first activity in the Legion was as commander of the post at Fort Dodge, Iowa, his home town. He was elected to that position before the first national convention of the Legion in 1919 and served until his appointment as department adjutant.

Dr. R. J. Laird of Algona, Iowa, took the department adjutancy following Barton's resignation. Laird resigned as national executive committeeman. That position was filled by Maurice Cahill of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, formerly alternate committeeman.

Would Make It Harder to Amend Constitution

A resolution making amendments to the Constitution of the United States more difficult was introduced in Frankling post of the American Legion, Columbus, Ohio, by L. D. Bower, journal clerk of the Ohio senate.

The resolution proposes an amendment to Article V of the Constitution making it necessary to secure a two-thirds majority of the actual membership in congress to initiate an amendment. While the ratification of an amendment by the state legislatures of three-fourths of the states is still retained, the resolution proposes that such ratification must represent three-fourths of the congressional representation of all the states. The resolution also provides that ratification must be accomplished within five years from the date of submission to the states.

Bower claims that under the provisions of Article V of the Constitution, not only may an amendment to the Constitution be proposed for ratification by even less than a minority of congress, but that the Constitution now may be ratified by a minority representation of the voting population.

Vice President Dawes Now Member of 40 and 8

Vice President Charles G. Dawes has taken a vow in addition to his vice presidential oath. He was recently sworn into the "40 and 8," official playground organization of the American Legion.

The "40 and 8 box-car society" of the Legion adopted its title from the information printed on French box cars warning itinerant members of the A. E. F. that the cars were for the accommodation of "40 Hommes ou 8 Chevaux" (forty men or eight horses).

Voyageur Dawes (all members of the 40 and 8 are termed "Voyageurs") was sworn into the box-car organization in his office in Chicago by George Dobson, chef de chemin de fer, national head of the society.

Angels Bothered Him

"One night I seen de angels settin' 'round ter keep company wid me," said Brother Williams, "but dey had sich inquirin' ways 'bout 'em, I 'lowed dat de bes' thing I could do was ter head fer de highway an' give 'em de whole house."—Atlanta Constitution.

GOVERNMENT TO STUDY TRACHOMA AMONG INDIANS

Complete Survey to Be Made on the Reservations Under Direction of Medical Association.

Washington.—A complete survey of every Indian family living on government Indian reservations for the purpose of making a record of Indians suffering with trachoma was contained in instructions issued by Secretary of Interior Work.

The action was taken as a result of a conference with an advisory council on trachoma for the Indian service appointed by the American Medical association, and composed of Dr. William H. Wilder of Chicago, chairman; Dr. Arnold Knapp of New York city, and Dr. William Campbell Posey of Philadelphia, well-known specialists in ophthalmology.

This committee, which has been making a study of the provalence of trachoma among the Indians, recommended the survey which will be conducted by the physicians of the Indian service stationed at the various agencies. It provides for a permanent record of every Indian suffering with trachoma, including sex and age and the status of disease, the housing conditions and hygienic surroundings of the Indian faimly. After the records have been completed, trachoma specialists will be sent to each reservation to examine and give treatment to the patients.

Included in the plans of the American Medical association committee is an educational campaign to teach the Indians the mode of transmission, the best means of avoiding contraction and prevention against trachoma. During a seven-day period twice a year, lectures by physicians and superintendents will be made daily to groups of Indians, instructions will be given in the Indian schools to both pupils and adults and papers will be prepared by the Indian students in the higher grades on trachoma. The missionaries at the agencies have also been invited to co-operate with the government in the program.

A circular containing a complete outline of suggestive medical treatment for trachoma was also sent to physicians of the Indian service.

Denies Septuagint Taken From Original Hebrew

Leipsic.—Prof. Franz Wutz in his book, "New Facts on the Septuaginta and Hebrew Bible," attacks the theory that the Greek-Alexandrian translation of the old testament, known as the Septuagint, is derived from the original Hebrew text.

The author is taken very seriously by biblical scholars.

Professor Wutz comes out with the new and somewhat startling statement that the Septuagint is largely a reproduction of Hebrew words written with Greek letters. He claims to have discovered that as early as 200 B. C. Jewish scholars utilized Greek-Hebrew texts for their translations into Greek.

These transcriptions, he believes, furnished not only an elucidation of the Septuagint—a feat hitherto considered impossible—but also opened up an entirely new vista in old biblical literature.

Rudolf Kittel recognizes in these discoveries a likely means of arriving at the much sought for original Hebrew text of the Old Testament.

More Attention Is Given to Physical Education

Washington.—Physical education in schools is required by law in 33 states. Thirteen now have state physical directors of education and most of the states have definite requirements for the training of teachers and supervisors for this work. One school gave professional courses in physical education 46 years ago, but now 75 institutions offer two, three, or four-year courses, and post-graduate work is given in many schools. A summary of present state requirements for directors and supervisors of physical education has been issued by the Department of the Interior, bureau of education.

Lightning Burns Clothing Off Man, but Fails to Kill

Twin Falls, Idaho.—Lightning blazed a circle about the head of Delfino Gonzales, Mexican track foreman and riddled and burned the hat, shoes and clothing off his body while he was at work aligning rails on the Oregon Short line Rogerson-Wells railroad front at Contact, Nev. He was brought to a hospital here suffering from burns. Gonzales was one of a number of workmen employed when the lightning struck during a rainstorm. All the others escaped uninjured.

Horse Catches Car

Sallisaw, Okla.—Although crowded out by automobiles, "old Dobbin" came back recently when he carried Jack Chuculate, farmer, past a speeding car of alleged motor thieves and crowded it into a fence. Chuculate drew a revolver and forced the men to drive to the county jail. He said they had broken the lock on the steering wheel of his car and drained the gasoline.

Accident Prevention

New York.—Students in continuation and evening schools in New York city are instructed in accident prevention. The first lesson was a visit to a museum, where almost every known device for the prevention of industrial accidents is on exhibition.

His Instructions

The broker was very sick, and at times delirious. In one of his lucid moments he asked the nurse what the last readings had shown his temperature to be. "One hundred and one," she said. "Good," said the patient. "When it gets to 101½ sell."

Takes the RUB out of SCRUB

Amber in United States

Amber is found in Colorado, Boulder county, and in adjoining counties, particularly in the Boulder coal fields. Amber is a fossil resin of vegetable origin. It is usually of a pale-yellow color, sometimes reddish or brownish; it is sometimes transparent, sometimes almost opaque. It occurs in round, irregular lumps, grains or drops; has a perfectly conchoidal fracture, is slightly brittle, emits an agreeable odor when rubbed, melts at 550 degrees Fahrenheit, and burns with a bright flame and pleasant smell.

"In Durance Vile"

This conversation is said to have taken place in an exclusive underworld circle:

"Here's a paper," said Languid Lewis, "which tells about a horse runnin' away with a woman, an' she was laid up for six weeks."

"That's nothin'," rejoined Boastful Benjamin. "A friend o' mine ran away with a horse, an' he was laid up for six years."

Who Will Be the Next Sergeant?

The board of police commissioners will meet in regular monthly session this evening at the city hall. It is expected that the board at that time will appoint a man to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Sergeant William F. Hanley. There is considerable speculation as to whom the board will appoint. Some say that Policeman Frank H. Fatum will be appointed and others that Policeman James A. Simpson will land the job. Fatum and Simpson stand first and second respectively on the eligible list submitted the police board by the municipal civil service board.

FALSE ALARM OF FIRE TURNED IN THIS MORNING

Shortly after 1 o'clock this morning a young man drove up to the fire box at the corner of North Front street and Washington avenue, and turned in a false alarm of fire. The fire call was 231. He then disappeared. The police are investigating. While the uptown firemen were responding to the call there was some excitement downtown as the call was counted as "23," which is the box at the Cornell Shops, and Cordts Hose went there.

Women to Insure Woodstock Plays

Committee of One Hundred Working Hard to Obtain One Thousand Members for Summer Productions of Phoenix Players.

Thursday afternoon the first official reports from the members of the women's committee of one hundred who are working to obtain one thousand members to attend the productions of the Phoenix Players at Woodstock this summer, met at the home of Mrs. Williams Carter.

Among the members of the committee who reported their full quota of ten or more memberships were: Mrs. Ralph Gregory, 20; Mrs. Cecil Chichester, 17; Mrs. G. D. B. Hasbrouck, 16; Miss Helen Westbrook 16, and Mrs. John D. Schoonmaker, Mis Elsa Knauth, Mrs. Seth Staples, Mrs. William D. Brinnier, Mrs. F. DeLiagre, Mrs. Walter Weyl, Miss Anna M. Steenken, Mrs. Birge Harrison, Mrs. Albert L. Webster, Mrs. Lotta Stoehr, Mrs. David Burgevin, Mrs. Van Deusen Hutton, and Mrs. George Burgevin.

It was stated at the meeting that the Woodstock members of the committee had arranged to give a supper to the Kingston members and their husbands on Tuesday evening in the garden of Mrs. Martin Schultze at Byrdcliffe.

Captain Stanley Howe presided at the meeting and Eustace Wyatt of the Phoenix Players gave a reading from "The Adding Machine."

Miss Ann Walters and Miss Haroldine Humphries, two members of the Players who arrived from New York that day, were the guests of honor at the meeting.

American Tribute to Work of Rider Haggard

It is many years since some one on this side of the Atlantic, chafing under the obligation of Anglo-Saxon fellowship, expressed his longing for the time when the Rudyards cease from Kipling and the Haggards ride no more. It was a forced marriage of names, yet it is doubtful whether Kipling at the height of his popularity ever reached an audience as large as that which palpitated over "King Solomon's Mines" and "She," the later now inconceivably immortal in more senses than one, on her own modest level in literature, the New York Times says, editorially. On that same level justice should be done to the very respectable figure of Allan Quatermain, lion hunter and mystic. For sheer drama memory will not easily forsake that scene of the African berserk Umslopogaas—spelling approximate—defending the staircase against a world of enemies. There are men today not too far advanced toward grandfatherhood who can still catch the horror of the impi, that merciless Zulu phalanx whose onset was doom.

Impi and assegai—they stand for an emotional experience which the generations are still going through. For the appeal of Rider Haggard has been international. It would not be surprising that he shares in Russia today the vogue of Jack London and Sherlock Holmes. World fame during the last half century of British letters has not fallen to the Hardys and the Kiplings, but to Conan Doyle, Rider Haggard and, as Mr. Shaw remarked the other day, "Charley's Aunt." For many years silent in his chosen field, Rider Haggard came into notice a few years ago when the great success of Pierre Benoist's "Atlantide" inevitably recalled "She." The French story was good, but "She" was much better.

Cross Again in Colosseum

Restoration of the cross to the center of the Roman Colosseum has caused much satisfaction to Catholics. More than fifty years ago, in the burst of anti-clerical excitement which followed the entry of the Italian government into Rome, this cross was removed. Recently Minister of Public Instruction Fedele ordered that it be replaced. He publicly regretted that it had ever been removed. For centuries the church has regarded the Colosseum as holy ground because of the many hundreds of Christian martyrs who perished there for their faith. The popes have been zealous in preventing its collapse and in restoring portions of it to their original condition. Now the Colosseum is a favorite resort of Romans on moonlight nights, when the ancient theater of blood echoes with gracious songs and choruses.

Remarkable Orchid

A solitary orchid, described by an expert as the most perfect he had ever seen, was exhibited at the Royal Horticultural society's flower show, Horticultural hall, Westminster, recently, says the Westminster Gazette.

It was grown by an amateur, R. Garrish, of the Manor, Milford, Salisbury, whose group of orchids won the society's gold medal.

Viscountess Folkstone is the name given the flower, and it was thought it was very unlikely that it could be repeated in its perfect form.

It forms a perfect circle, and has an outer border of deep-rose pink fading to nearly white. Then there is another ring of brown, and an inner circle of pinkish white. It is the only flower on the stem.

Lighting for Pictures

Every picture has a right to the best light that can be found for it. It is often true that a wall space on which there is not the right light for one picture is quite the proper place for a picture with different colors or details.

While vivid flower pieces and garden scenes, sunlit landscapes and bright interiors do much to enliven a somber corner of a room. There is no picture which may not be seen to better advantage if well lighted. (This does not mean glaringly lighted.)

MEN OF SCIENCE WATCH VOLCANOES

Risk Lives to Make Tests and Observations.

After a sleep of four hundred years, the famous Mexican volcano, Popocatepetl, is in eruption and volcanologists are hurrying to the spot.

A queer profession is volcanology, twin-sister of seismology. Literally, a volcanologist is a "Boy Who Stands on the Burning Deck, Whence All But He Had Fled." Good nerves—or none at all—are indispensable for the work.

When a volcano has been quiescent for so many years that it may reasonably be considered to be extinct, it ceases to attract attention. But several big "fire mountains" that are merely slumbering uneasily have their official watch dogs, ever vigilant and busy with their tests and observations, up in a little observatory near the rim of the bubbling crater.

You find them on Taal, in the Philippines, and on Vesuvius, on Kilauea, in the Hawaiians, and on Asuma, in Japan. In addition to the permanent stations, temporary observatories are set up, ever and anon, by parties of "watchdogs" well versed in the ways of earthquakes and eruptions, when word comes of a volcano that apparently intends to give trouble.

The practical result of all the steadily accumulating mass of observations is a dossier of data that enables many an eruption to be foreseen in time to give warnings as to its probable extent and direction, so that lives can be saved and property removed from what, it is realized, will be the track of lava rivers. Sometimes these warnings can be given even weeks ahead. The town of St. Pierre, Martinique, that was overwhelmed by Mount Pelee, had a fortnight's warning, but neglected to profit by it.

One of the most exciting experiences of "volcano watchdogs" of recent years was during the big eruption of Kilauea, when a party of plucky American volcabologists camped all night at the foot of a line of fountains of fiery froth three times the height of Cleopatra's Needle. It was a splendid spectacle, the blindingly incandescent molten rock spurting up in continuous jets from the fountain cones, like monstrous roman candles. For all their intrepidity, however, they must have had bad moments of feeling that home was not such a bad place after all when, about 3 o'clock in the morning, the fiery fountains "put a little more pep into it" and shot up to greater height than St. Paul's cathedral, London. The river of lava that ensued after this first blow-off of gas flowed 12 miles down the forested mountain-side to the sea.

Now the Blue Carnation

The ambition of English florists is to grow a blue carnation. The incontestable fact that in nature no such thing as a blue carnation or a blue rose or a yellow sweet pea or a black tulip occurs is no argument against the florists' endeavor to produce one of these unnatural flowers. If our gardens were only allowed to show such blooms as may be found in a state of nature they would be miserably poorer. A wild rose is a charming flower, but what reason is there in an asceticism which would deny us the color and form of Madame Chatenay or the fragrance of General McArthur because these roses are unnatural, the product of the florists' science?—London Telegraph.

Interesting Reading

An old man, a real patriarch of the hills, wandered into the public library of a southern Indiana town, recently, and stood for a few minutes looking around. Finally approaching the librarian he said, rather defensively. "I reckon ye don't object to my readin' in that book there, do ye?" pointing with his cane in the direction of the dictionary.

Being assured that he was free to use the book, he seated himself comfortably, and seemingly, with much interest, perused the pages of the book for some time.—Indianapolis News.

Dog Adopts Chicks

Reversing the recent case in which a Rhode Island Red hen adopted a litter of puppies a four-year-old poodle, owned by Theodore Gauthier of West Springfield, Mass., is playing mother to a brood of 15 chicks, the Philadelphia Public Ledger says.

The chicks, incubator born, attracted the poodle's attention when brought home by Mr. Gauthier. Finally the poodle was allowed to adopt them after much whining and refusing to eat. The chicks are being brought up with an abnormal tendency to cleanliness, for Fifi licks them as she would a puppy.

Fire Destroys Wild Life

The greatest single agency of wild life destruction is the forest fire, so we are informed by government officials. For eight years, from 1917 to 1924, the average annual number of forest fires in this country was 41,000. During this time 9,000,000 acres of forest land was burned over each year or an area twice that of Upper and Lower Michigan was destroyed by the red devastator. This loss totals over $12,000,000 annually.

Austrian Interest Rates

Although interest rates were reduced in Austria recently, the minimum rate per year for short-term loans to first-class firms is approximately 16.5 per cent.

Beginning of Cricket

There are some evidences of a similar game having been played in the Fourteenth century, but it is probable that cricket was not known until some time in the Sixteenth century.

Those who have cars are requested to bring them and take as many extra persons as they have room for. All will take lunch together at half past twelve. Coffee, lemonade, eggs, potato salad and ice cream will be provided free by the church for all who come. Each one will bring whatever sandwiches and additional lunch may be desired. Harvard Has a Fighting Chance Closest Race in Ten Years Expected on The Thames River Today When Harvard Crew Meets Yale—Bull Dog Remains the Favorite.

(By Davis J. Walsh.)

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New London, Conn., June 19.—By nightfall a new chapter in rowing history will have been written on the liquid page of the Thames River course with the blade of an oar dipped in agonized, human sweat. By nightfall the eight-oared Varsity crew of Yale University will have preserved its dynasty over the kingdom of the oar or Harvard will have forced its abdication by a victory that even our most expert of experts concede to be well within the bounds of possibility.

Harvard has a fighting crew which has a fighting chance.

The phrase was mouthed knowingly by the thousands of Yale and Harvard followers who rode into town this morning under Crimson and Blue hat bands for the annual four mile seance of legalized backbreaking. Harvard money, seemingly was in evidence on every hand and it served to back the odds down from 10 to 7 to a rather short price on Yale of 6 to 5.

The Bull Dog remained the favorite but such was the confidence of the Harvard camp that smart rowing men took refuge behind the noncommittal and predicted the closest race of the last ten years.

Ed Stevens, Harvard coach, contributed to this idea by declaring today that Harvard has come along so far during recent weeks that it is the fastest crew he ever handled.

Ed Leader, who has yet to lose a race in his three years at the head of Yale rowing, countered with the declaration that he considered his present outfit to be as good at the four mile distance as the 1924 ensemble. The latter was just good enough to beat the world at the Olympic games in Paris.

That made the issue a stand-off in the claiming stakes and recent time trials served to confirm this belief. It developed today that both crews broke the up-stream record on Saturday last, Yale having done 20 19 and Harvard 20.27.

Similar conditions will prevail today, the race being scheduled to start at the railroad bridge and continue four miles up-stream to a point beyond the old navy yard. Fair skies and comparatively smooth water enhanced the occasion. Six o'clock, when the wind will have shouted itself down to a whisper, was set as the official starting time.

Preliminary races for Freshmen and Junior Varsity crews were held this morning with the Harvard Junior boat slightly the worse for an epidemic of boils. A man simply can't row a neck and neck race while using a set of boils for lavaliers.

Taking the time of Varsity trials as a basis for argument, some felt that they expressed the respective merits of the eights.—But Harvard dissented.

It knew it had a fighting crew that had a fighting chance and Crimson camp-followers proceeded to discount the difference in the times turned in by declaring that the Yale shell was allowed to drift several lengths away from the mark before breaking into a racing stroke. Harvard, on the contrary, went the full four miles, and the last two of them at that, with only seven men rowing, that is, according to the story at Red Top. It seems that the Harvard No. 2 man broke his oar lock at the half way mark and merely went for the ride from then on.

In brief, Harvard wanted it known that Yale would have to row like galley slaves to repeat its victory of the last four years.

Special and attractive arrangements have been made this year for the annual Sunday school picnic of the Clinton Avenue Methodist Church. For several weeks past the committee has been on the look-out for a suitable place for the annual festivities to take place July 4. Clear Officials In Teapot Dome

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Cheyenne, Wyo., June 19.—The Teapot Dome naval oil reserve lease granted Harry F. Sinclair by Former Secretary of the Interior A. B. Fall was secured without conspiracy or fraud. This decision was rendered by Federal Judge T. Blake Kennedy, in district court here today in a lengthy opinion in the equity suit wherein the United States government sought to annul the lease Sinclair has on the $50,000,000 Wyoming naval oil field.

Judge Kennedy absolved navy officials including Former Secretary of the Navy Denby from culpability in the negotiations for the Teapot Dome lands. He also said the government suffered no material damage.

Judge Kennedy declared that the executive order of President Harding transferring authority over naval lands from the interior department was practically eliminated from the Teapot case because government counsel had not attacked the president's right to issue such an order. This order was attacked in Judge McCormack's decision in the Doheny case in California.

In discussing the famous bond transaction involving the alleged passage of $230,000 in liberty bonds from Sinclair to Fall through the Continental Trading Company of Canada, the court said no connection between Sinclair and Fall had been established in this regard.

Judge Kennedy said the charge of secrecy in connection with negotiations between Fall and Sinclair for Teapot were not substantiated. Dozens of department officials of both the navy and interior departments, he said, were thoroughly familiar with all the plans. He said the fact that congress was not consulted was not significant.

In Memoriam.

In sad and loving memory of our darling mother, Magdalena Marquart, who departed this life June 13, 1916.

When the evening shades are falling
And we're sitting all alone.
In our hearts there comes a longing
If you only could come back home.
The blow was great, the shock severe
We did not think your death so near.
We saw you suffer, we heard your sighs,
With aching hearts and weeping eyes.
We saw you sinking hour by hour
Yet could not stop death's awful power.
But now you calmly sleep at rest
All pain, all aches, all suffering past.
Though from you we had to part
Your memory still dwells within our hearts
Never to be forgotten.

Financial and Commercial

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, June 19.—Forward price movements in the stock market today were confined to a small number of industrial and specialty stocks and represented little more than continued activity of the pools. Professionals whipped up the copper stocks in the first hour or two as the result of the advance in copper metal to around 14 cents a pound, but switched to the specialties shortly after the noon period.

Railroad and public utility shares heretofore inactive returned to the active list, and made rallies of a point or more Colorado Fuel, Montana Power, Philadelphia Company, Postum Cereal and American and Foreign Power replaced the spectacular Pierce Arrow and Maxwell Motors as speculative leaders; New York Central and other railroad shares regained most of the recent losses.

There was sufficient short selling and profit taking to cause lower prices, particularly in the industrial leaders. Bearish traders again concentrated their attacks on American Can and Baldwin, but apparetly with little success in bringing out long stocks. They had better success with Pierce Arrow Common and Ward Baking, though the latter regained its losses later in the day.

Domestic business conditions and money markets were unchanged.

Detroit dispatches were as insistent with regard to impending mergers in the motor industry. Automobile circles look confidently for a combination of Hudson, Hupp, Briggs and other car and accessories concerns

Third Party Ends With La Follette

Was Built Solely Around Wisconsin Senator—Wheeler, His Running Mate, Unwilling to Leave Democratic Party Again—Senate Insurgents Disintegrate.

ROBERT M. LA FOLLETTE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, June 19—The political consequences of the death of Senator LaFollette will be fare-reaching.

In the opinion of Republican and Democratic leaders here this removal from the American political scenes at this time will mean:

1. The collapse of the Independent third party movement which LaFollette started a year ago.
2. The crumbling of the little bloc of insurgents in the Senate.
3. An opportunity for the regular Republican organization, not only in Wisconsin, but throughout the northwest to capture control from the LaFollette followers.

The third party was builty solely around LaFollette. Immediately after the November election, in which the Wisconsin senator polled more than 4,500,000 votes, the strongest groups in the LaFollette ranks—notably the American Federation of Labor and the railroad brotherhoods—broke away and declared they would no longer support a third party movement.

With LaFollette severely crushed in the election and ill, there was little enthusiasm for a permanent independent politcal organization, but it was believed here that La Follette could have saved his new party could he have retained or recovered his health.

The titular leader of the third party nationally is Senator Burton K. Wheeler, Democrat, of Montana, who as LaFollette's running mate last year. Wheeler, however, has been received back into the Democratic ranks from which he bolted to join LaFollette and he admittedly has little desire to break away again.

Unless a new leader, now generally unknown to the people at large, comes forward, it appears that the third party is doomed.

The so-called insurgent group in the senate, which gave LaFollette the balance of power in the sixty-eighth congress, also faces a similar fate—disintegration through lack of leadership, according to the opinion in political circles.

It is considered probable that Borah of Idaho (who, however, has been leaning more strongly to the support of the administration) may hold the LaFollette group, but it is not beilieved that he could exert complete command.

SPANISH AND FRENCH NEGOTIATORS AGREE.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Paris, June 19.—Franco-Spanish negotiators at Madrid have agreed on naval cooperation, insuring the fullest cooperation in the blockade against the Riffs, the foreign office announced today.

At the same time, the cabinet approved a drive of the French secret service against French Communists charged with lending moral aid to Abd-el-Krim, leader of the Riffian tribesmen.

By the agreement reached at Madrid the French navy may patrol the Spanish Moroccan coast and the Spanish navy may operate in French Moroccan waters. No definite sectors have been assigned to the patrol ships and there has been no immediate move toward the appointment of a unified high command.

Both Spanish and French negotiators were agree on the most thorough cooperation, however.

At the cabinet meeting it was brought out that the radical French Communists have been in direct communication with the Riffian tribesmen and have assured the Riffs that all France was opposed to the Riff war and in sympathy with Abd-el-Krim.

CROWDS WITNESS HANGING OF MESSIER

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Sorel, Que., June 19.—Pale and on the verge of collapse, Henri Messier, 19 year old murderer, was half carried by guards to the scaffold in the jail yard here today and before a crowd of several hundred of his towsmen, who climbed to the roofs of neighboring houses to witness the death scene, paid by the hanging with his own life for the life of his victim.

The lad went to eternity with the thought that his friend Hermenegilde Dufault, convicted with him, was to follow him on the scaffold but Dufault was sent to the penitentiary for life, having received a last minute reprieve from Ottawa.

First Baseman Poole Making Good

Manager Connie Mack made a lucky strike when he secured First Baseman Poole to play the initial bag in place of Joe Hauser, who is out of the game with a broken foot.

Perritt Had a Neck Like Pickled Turkey

Joe Cantillon has a knack of being brutally frank at times, this working in with his subtle line of humor. Any of the players who have ever been associated with him can dig back in their memory and always pull out a laugh.

Sherry Magee, now doing a pinch hitting and general utility role for Milwaukee, tells this one:

"Several seasons ago, when I was with Minneapolis, Pol Perritt joined the team. Pol had a neck like a pickled turkey and they could never use his map for any of those collar ads in the magazines.

"'Well,' said Joe, when Perritt reported, 'you look like you might help out my pitching staff a little, even if you don't add anything to its looks.'"

It so happened, however, that Perritt did neither.

John Bassler's Career Has Been Quite Varied

John Bassler, star catcher of the Tigers, is now starting his fifth season with the Detroit club. He had been the regular backstop of that team for the past four years. He had previously been a member of the Cleveland Indians for several seasons and he came to the Tigers from the Los Angeles club of the Pacific Coast league.

Bassler began his professional career with the York club of the Tri-State league as a catcher in 1912. He also played with the Pensacola club of the Cotton States league during that season. At the start of the season of 1913 he was drafted by the Indians, but he finished that season with the Toledo club of the American association. He also started the season of 1914 with the Cleveland club, but he was again sent back to Toledo on option.

Bassler was back with the Indians once more when the season of 1915 got under way, but he was released to Los Angeles in June of that year. He remained with Los Angeles until after the close of the season of 1920. On January 10, 1921, he was traded by the Los Angeles club to the Tigers in exchange for Catcher Stanage and four other players. Since joining the Tigers he has been the regular catcher for that team. Last year his batting average was .346 for a total of 124 games.

Fake Kick Is Restored in Canadian Rugby Code

The Canadian rugby rules committee has restored the famous fake kick in the game. The new rule provides that the ball-carrier must not pass the ball forward after he starts on his way through the line. He must be the furthest back player from the scrimmage when he takes the ball. Those players who cross the three-yard line in front of the carrier must not interfere beyond the three yards. The fake kick is a real thrill-producer and the ever-present threat of the play will do much to reduce the superiority of the defense over the offense in the Canadian fall pastime.

Governor Plans Personal Appeal

To Talk Extemporaneously to Legislators in Special Session on State Parks Situation—Talks Better That Way, He Says.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, No. Y., June 19.—Governor Smith is planning to go before the special session of the legislature next Monday night without a prepared message and make a personal appeal for the passage of his compromise state park appropriation bill

This will be the first time in the state's history that a governor ever has appeared before a joint session of the senate and assembly without a set speech.

"I want to have a heart to heart talk with the members on parks and my thoughts come much quicker when I stand up before an audience than when I try to dictate to one stenographer," the governor said today.

Republican leaders insisted today that the Thayer bill which the governor vetoed last winter, will be repassed at the special session. Under the Thayer measure $6,000,000 of the $15,000,000 park bond issue would have been appropriated for immediate use.

FARM POULTRY

FIND WEED IS CAUSE OF "GRASS EGGS"

Presence of the common weed known as shepherd's purse (Capsella bursa-pastoris) in pasture of laying hens is responsible for a peculiar condition in the eggs known to the egg buyer as "grass egg," "alfalfa," or "green rot," investigations by Prof. L. F. Payne of the Kansas State Agricultural college poultry department indicate. Professor Payne's account of the investigations is contained in Poultry Science.

"Grass eggs" were especially prevalent on the market last spring, Professor Payne observed, but no explanation could be offered by buyers or flock owners.

In less than a week after the hens were given free range in the garden in the spring, eggs from the flock kept by Professor Payne at his home developed dark yolks so strong in flavor that they could not be relished. Professor Payne discovered that the birds were eating freely of shepherd's purse, which grew in profusion in the garden. Several flocks of chickens from which a large percentage of eggs offered for sale had dark or olive-colored yolks were located through a Manhattan shipper. These flocks were examined, and it was found that they were eating the same weed.

Experiments then were instituted at the college poultry farm. One pen of hens that had not received green feed in any form the previous five months was placed on wheat pasture and another pen on pasture containing shepherd's purse.

"The eggs from the hens that had had shepherd's purse ad libitum began to show dark yolks in four days, while yolks from the wheat pasture hens developed a dark color, but did not, within two weeks, develop the olive color," Professor Payne wrote. "Subsequent experiments were conducted in which three pens of hens that had not received green feed in any form for five months previous to the test were used. Pens one, two, and three were given a liberal supply daily of fresh alfalfa, penny cress (Thlapsi arvense), and shepherd's purse respectively. Other hens on the poultry farm were fed green sprouted oats daily. The yolks from the alfalfa and sprouted oats pens continued normal; but olive-colored yolks were found in both the penny cress and shepherd's purse pens."

Professor Payne suggests two preventive methods—either keep the hens confined until there is a variety of green feed available, or supply them with wheat or rye pasture or sprouted oats throughout the winter so they will have no desire to "fill up" on these particular weeds.

Use for Trap Nests

A trap nest is a laying nest so arranged that after a hen enters it she is confined until released by the attendant.

When possible it is advisable to trap-nest the layers for the following reasons:

1. To tame the birds, thereby tending toward increased egg production.
2. To furnish definite knowledge concerning traits and habits of individuals.
3. To furnish the only satisfactory basis for utility or other breeding.
4. To eliminate the nonproductive hen.
5. To add mechanical precision to judgment and experience in developing and maintaining the utility of a flock.

For further information and plans showing the construction of a trap nest, send to the Department of Agriculture at Washington, for Farmers' Bulletin 682, "A Simple Trap Nest."

Poultry Hints

Hens in the laying houses and bare yards need a lot of green feed.

• • •

Brooders permit the production of early broilers, which is one of the most profitable phases of the industry.

• • •

Late chicks are hard to raise and slow in maturing. Such chicks are easy prey to diseases, and robbers of the roost in many ways.

• • •

Get the brooder in condition before putting in the chicks. Disinfect it well and start it some time before the chicks enter it. The house must be warm and dry, and preferably on fresh, clean location.

• • •

Thousands of worthless producers get their "start" during the hatching and brooding season.

• • •

Toe-mark the chicks soon after they are hatched. This fixes their age and classification. Do a neat job with a sharp punch and keep away from the foot bones.

• • •

Give the young chicks a chance to dry off and get their "sea legs" before putting them into the brooder, and be careful not to chill them while making the transfer.

The League of Women Voters was represented at the conference by Mrs. Casper Whitey and Mrs Gorden Norrie of New York.

Mrs. Roosevelt, Miss Nancy Cook of Yonkers and Mrs Florence Dickerman of Oswego arranged the session with the governor.

State Rests in Shepherd Case

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Chicago, Ill., June 19.—The cross-examination of "Dr." Charles Faiman wound its hectic way through the morning session of the trial of William D. Shepherd today and as the time for recess neared was in the throes of a star chamber argument over the admissibility of testimony regarding an alleged swindle to which Faiman was said to have been a party in Minneapolis.

Frequent legal clashes between Robert E. Crowe, state's attorney, and William Stewart, chief of the counsel fighting to free Shepherd for the alleged murder of his foster son, William N. McClintock, hampered progress and prospects of the state's resting its case today.

At the end of a two hour argument the court sustained the state's objections and the process of cross-examination went on.

Following Faiman's testimony the state rested its case. The defense began introducing its evidence.

5,573 Renewal Licenses Issued

Up to the close of business at the local motor vehicle bureau at 237 Fair street, Thursday evening, only 5,573 renewal operators' licenses had been issued. The last day that holders of 1924-25 cards can legally operate a motor vehicle is June 30, as after that date anyone operating a motor vehicle without an operators' 1925-26 license or a chauffeur's license will be liable to arrest. There were 13,154 operators' licenses issued for the year 1924-25 in Ulster county, and it is estimated that there are over 9,000 yet to be issued this year. As there are but nine more days before July 1, the usual big rush with resultant crowding and long waits can be looked for at the local motor bureau office, Fair street.

Joy Rider Escapes Death Five Times

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Taunton, Mass., June 19.—If the movie camera man had been along when Timothy McCarthy, twenty-three, of Boston, out of work and needing "something to stimulate his blood," borrowed an automobile, they would have got a film worth recording.

Chased by four policemen, who fired several shots, Timothy crashed into two automobiles and a telegraph pole.

The gastank exploded, firing the wrecked automobile and another automobile.

McCarthy, unhurt, fled from the wreckage, ran along the railroad tracks and escaped death under the wheels of an express train by a hair's breadth.

Finally he was captured by police and locked up.

"THEY ARE WEARING"—
Reg. U. S. Pat. Of.
Straws in Paris.

Within the last few days, there has been a spurt in the fashion for straw hats that makes the vogue far more important than it has been for several summers in Paris. Bangkoks, and the allied exotic straws, Reboux's crocheted straw, and Milans, are mostly in evidence, and there is comparatively little crin.

* * *

While many are dyed to match the costume and to match their frequent velvet trimmings, following the craze for ensembles in color, many, also, are left in the natural shade.

* * *

Grosgrain ribbon hats have also come to the fore with warm weather, always in soft shapes, and more frequently in pinky beige, bois de rose, cream or ecru.

* * *

The choice of these shades and of straws in natural color is said to be due to the increasing difficulty of matching up costume colors, and some say that we shall see a big vogue for colored costumes worn with hosiery, gloves and hats in some neutral nude shade, with blond, beige or bois de rose shoes.

* * *

Another grosgrain hat that is much seen is a small supple shape accredited first to Descat, composed of narrow ribbons in three graded shades, used alternately one above the other around the head.

"THEY ARE WEARING"—

In New York.

Fifth and Park avenues presented very gay colorings the first warm days, when women were abroad without coats. Prints, as gay as ever were worn on southern beaches, were seen, and crepe frocks in brilliant colors—purple leading—made for interest.

* * *

Bangkok hats, with crepe crowns dyed to match their brilliant hues, were another note, and, in these, purple was by far the most popular color.

* * *

Animal scarfs have been noted about town more this spring than last—the silk scarf sharing favor with them this season.

* * *

A smartly clad girl in natural kasha, had an envelope made of matching material, bound with gold.

* * *

Gray shoes and stockings are becoming more generally in use, and gray hats continue to top not only all gray costumes, but others.

Songs of Troubadours

There were several kinds of songs sung by the troubadours—the canzonet, or love song; serenade, or evening song; aubade, or morning song; servante in praise of patrons, roundelay, or song with refrain or chorus; dance song accompanying the round dance, and the pastourelle, treating of Arcadian love.

Indians Well Named

The Snake Indians were so-called because of the characteristics of these natives in quickly concealing themselves when once discovered. They seemed to glide away in the grass, sagebrush, and rocks and disappear with all the subtlety of a serpent.

Metal Track's Advantage

It has been shown that a horse can draw one and two-thirds times as much of a load on a metal track as on a good asphalt surface, five times as much as on cobblestone paving and about twenty times the load it can pull on an ordinary mud road.

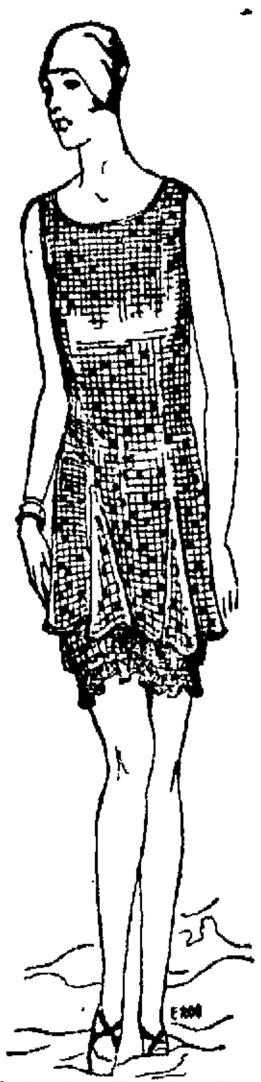
GODETS ARE LAUNCHED FOR BATHING COSTUMES, AND PUZZLE PRINTS ARE THE RAGE.

The bathing suit which is little more than a tunic, showing matching or contrasting bloomers beneath, is perhaps the headliner of the season. What material is chosen is unimportant, so long as it is effective.

There is a liking, as all who have window-shopped will attest, for bright cretonnes in large upholstery patterns, and there are many prints in crepes and silks which are smartly sponsored. Among these are polka dots, or silks that have a scattered formation of dots. For that matter, polka dots are seen everywhere, being by no means confined to beach wear.



A Distinctive Bathing Frock of Peach Gingham, Printed in Brown, Blue and Yellow, Introduces the Godet.

The cross word puzzle, responsible for so much, has enlarged the style vocabulary as well—there are so many cross word puzzle prints that, obviously, new names must be found for them. There are ever so many cross word prints used for beach costumes.

Some bathing suits suggest the popular pastime of word hunting by other than printed methods. There is, for instance, a sort of patch work bathing suit, which was launched at Palm Beach and has been gracing the windows of smart shops. It has checkered appliques of contrasting silk at desired areas—the favorite combination being turquoise blue on purple.

Taffeta needs no introduction to bathers; it has fashioned smart suits from time immemorial, and is again being offered not only in plain but in plaided effects. Many bathing suits, which from afar appear to be made of gingham, are really of gingham-patterned taffeta.

Brooklyn Giants Here Tonight

Ted Earl Will Probably Pitch Tonight Against Fast Brooklyn Team—Russell Against Red Sox Saturday.

Clyde Russell or Ted Earl will get the assignment this afternoon against the Brooklyn Royal Giants with the chances for the latter being selected. Earl has had a little more rest than Russell and his showing in the first game which he played here against the Lancaster Red Sox should warrant his selection to stop the fast travelling Giants who already have two games to their credit against the Colonials. Then too Russell carried the Colonials through to victory over the Poughkeepsie Red Sox and as Russell seems to know what the Red Sox don't want he probably will be held for the game in Poughkeepsie tomorrow afternoon.

The Colonials will take the field this afternoon with a greatly strengthened team and the Colonial management will make every effort to stop the Brooklyn Royal Giants. "Cannonball" Redding who is heralded as a great pitcher will probably oppose the Colonials. On the last trip here the "cannonball" went in for a couple of innings and after a rather shaky start pulled himself together and came through with all flags flying. The Colonials are waiting for Redding if he is selected and anticipate turning the tables on the Brooklynite.

In the outer garden this evening will be found Bill Schwab in his old place at left field. Wilcox and Kelly will complete the trio and the Deegan-Robins combination think they have a trio of as good outfielders as can be found.

Saturday's game at Poughkeepsie will find the Colonials with about the same line-up. If Earl pitches today and he probably will, Russell will serve them up Saturday for the Red Sox. The Poughkeepsie fans after seeing their team go down to defeat at the hands of the Kingston Colonials have been waiting for this game in hope that they can send the Colonials back with a severe punishment.

With Earl and Russell disposed of in today's and Saturday's games it looks like Paul Kinney for Sunday afternoon against the D. & H. Generals at the Fair Grounds. The Sunday game will be called at 3:30 o'clock and the game this afternoon at 6:30 o'clock.

Middies' Chances Look Better

Crews Will Work Hard Today and Saturday, Easing Up on Sunday—Rice May Resign as Pennsylvania Coach.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 19.—Coaches cracked the whip today over the broad backs of seven Varsity crews who will compete in the Hudson on Monday for the Intercollegiate rowing title. Hard work today and tomorrow, with tapering off Sunday, was the order in every camp.

The talk of the settlement today was chiefly of the Navy.

The Middies' chance has looked none too rosy thus far, but they were clocked late yesterday over the four mile course in slightly over 19 minutes and looked better than they have at any previous time.

Rusty Callow and his Washington crew, however, are still generally favored to lead the march down the river. Whether this is due to the previous victories of the Far Westerners or to the form they have displayed, in workouts here is difficult to ascertain. Callow is confident but uncommunicative.

Somewhat of a sensation was caused in the rowing settlement today over the announcement that Coach Jim Rice of Pennsylvania, had resigned. Rice declined to discuss it, saying that he was intent only at this time on trying to send his Pennsylvania crew across the line first on Monday.

"After that I may talk," he declared.

Penn's chances, never considered good, have dropped still further as a result of the news, however.

Cake Sale Saturday.

The Gem Society of the Clinton Avenue M. E. Church will hold a cake and food sale at the L. B. Van Wagenen Company store on Saturday afternoon, commencing at two o'clock.

Man o'War Is Greatest Sire

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, June 19.—Three years ago Man o'War proved himself the greatest thoroughbred of the modern generation, if not in the history of the turf. Today his fame is mounting again, although his his days on the turf are over. He is now one of our greatest sires.

The sensations of the 1925 racing season to date have been three in number. The first two were the surprising victories of Coventry and Flying Ebony in the Preakness and the Kentucky Derby, respectively. The third was and is the excellent running of Man o'War's "get."

The best of these, perhaps, are American Flag, a three-year-old colt, and the fillies, Florence Nightingale and Edith Cavell. But the entire family seems to be a worthy one.

Ran One-Two.

It was only a few days ago that Flagship and Lightship ran one-two in a mile at Belmont Park for three-year-olds and up, beating some of our good handicap horses. Both are sons of the immortal thoroughbred that ran in the colors of Samuel Riddle.

More recently Edith Cavell stepped five furlongs in the clinking time of fifty-eight seconds, to spread-eagle her field by five lengths. Twice only during the Belmont meeting was this time bettered, and Edith is only a two-year-old.

Her sister, Florence Nightingale, showed to even better advantage in winning the Oaks, one of the real classics of the turf. This filly, in fact, has come to be regarded as the best at her age and weight now under colors.

American Flag, however, brought home the greatest stake of the family when he won the historic Withers, one of the oldest stake races known to the American turf. The colt is so good that many rate him well beyond the Preakness and Derby winners in general ability.

Man o'War has another son, By Hisself, but he seems to be the unregenerate member of an otherwise worthy family. He was good enough to be entered as a starter in the Preakness, after a creditable two-year-old season, but was never in the running at any time. Since then he has been defeated in several minor races.

A few more performances like these and Man o'War will cut this scion off without an oat.

Von Elm Hopes To Wrest Title

By Telegraph to The Freeman

Los Angeles, June 19—George Von Elm, 23-year-old Los Angeles star amateur golfer, who parts his hair in the middle but halves his holes with none, is at the peak of form this season.

Von Elm's consuming ambition is to wrest the amateur title from Bobby Jones, of Atlanta, at the national amateur tourney in Pittsburgh in September and his critics believe his game this summer forecasts a win for the westerner.

Already this year Von Elm has won three tourneys.

Playing steady, consistent golf, he captured the Southern California open, the Southern California amateur championship, and the Northern California open championship. He is a former Pacific Northwest title holder and Trans-Mississippi champion.

Averages 72.

This year Von Elm has not shot a course in over a 75 score and has averaged 72.

Von Elm is regarded by critics as the leading westerner and one of the few perfect types of the mentally and physically perfect player.

The Angeleno never hesitates in his game.

He picks his clubs quickly and once a club is drawn from the bag it stays out.

He steps swiftly to the ball and swings fast. Recently he played the Rancho course here with a record 64 score in less than an hour and a half. Ordinarily players require three hours for the Rancho course.

Von Elm walks swiftly while playing golf. This he believes helps to keep him in condition.

Trains Constantly.

The California star often hits the links at 5 o'clock in the morning. Almost all his playing is done early in the day and is always followed by a rubdown. He trains almost as earnestly as a pugilist.

Von Elm does not drink or smoke and follows a careful meal program.

To drink or eat too much or too plentifully of rich food has a decided effect on his game, the youthful star claims.

Von Elm is playing his irons with unusual crispness this season.

His friends figure this is his supreme year and that he will give Jones and other stars an extremely hard battle, if he does not come through with the amateur honors.

Greb Begins Training.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, June 19.—Harry Greb began training here today for his title bout with Mickey Walker at the Polo Grounds July 2. Greb is in good shape, having fought seven bouts in the last six weeks.

CURRENT OFFERINGS AT THE THEATRES

There is plenty of entertainment in the five act bill now playing at the Kingston Opera House. The Pendar Sisters in a singing comedy skit are a riot of laughter. Rody Jordon with his saxophone, Edwards and Allen offer song and patter. Brock and Brown two eccentric comedians and Arthur and Partner in an unusual novelty juggling offering. The photoplay is a western thriller starring Jack Hoxie in "Ridin' Thunder."

"The Goose Hangs High" made a great impression at Keeney's yesterday where it opened for the last half of this week and will be repeated again tonight and tomorrow. Once again, the director of "The Covered Wagon" reveals his astonishing faculty for probing beneath the surface of human lives and bringing out the drama and heart-aches. Jimmie Connors's Orchestra and a Lloyd Hamilton comedy are the added features on this program.

At the Auditorium today "The Man Who Played Square," with Buck Jones. It is a western classic of furious fighting, reckless riding and risky romance, during thrilling times in the picturesque gold mining country.
